Daily National Grain Market Summary

St. Joseph, MO
July 3, 2001
Report Supplied By USDA

Grain and soybean bids continued their upward swing due mainly to technical buying on the board and some weather concerns. Wheat 1 to 7 cents higher. Corn 3 to 4 cents higher. Sorghum 14 to 15 cents higher. Soybeans steady to 3 cents higher, with Central Illinois 2 cents lower.

Slight gains in wheat pits a reaction to fund buying after prices dropped so low. Winter wheat harvest continues to make progress and is reported 55 percent complete. Spring wheat crop ratings were increased to 68 percent good to excellent. Spill over strength kept corn and soybean bids climbing. Hot temperatures and some rain are in next weeks forecast for the Midwest. Export demand remains slow this week, limiting advances.

The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

JULY 9–15, 2001

BASTILLE DAY, JULY 14

CROPS AND ROBBERS

July 14 is Bastille Day, a national holiday in France that commemorates the storming of the Bastille fortress in Paris. Built in the 14th century and destroyed at the beginning of the French Revolution in 1789, the Bastille prison had become a symbol of royal oppression. Almost two centuries later, on Bastille Day 1976, Canada's House of Commons voted to abolish the death penalty; the vote released 11 men from death row. Canada's last executions (by hanging) had been carried out in 1962. Crimes punishable by execution included rape, murder, and treason. A hundred years earlier, there had been over 200 crimes punishable by death, including the unlawful taking of turnips.

A thief knows a thief as a wolf knows a wolf.

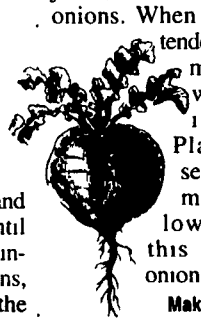
TIP OF THE WEEK

☞ Idling wastes fuel; just 15 seconds consumes more fuel than restarting the car.

STOLEN TURNIP PUREE

8 medium white turnips
1/8 teaspoon ground caraway
3 medium yellow onions
5 tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons fresh parsley, chopped
1 teaspoon lemon juice
salt and pepper, to taste

Pare and slice turnips, and boil with caraway until tender, for about 20 minutes. Peel and chop onions, and sauté them in half the butter. Add parsley, lemon juice, and seasonings to onions. When turnips are tender, drain and mash them with remaining butter. Place into a serving bowl, make a hollow, and fill this with the onion mixture.



Makes 4 servings.

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

East Fluid Milk And Cream Review

Madison, Wis.
July 3, 2001
Report Supplied by USDA

Spot prices of class II cream, dollars per lb. butterfat: F.O.B. producing plants: Northeast - 2.6288-2.7692. Delivered Equivalent: Atlanta - 2.5686-2.7692 mostly 2.6488-2.7291.

PRICES OF CONDENSED SKIM, dollars per lb. wet solids, F.O.B. producing plants: Northeast, Class II, includes monthly formula prices: 1.0500-1.1500; Northeast, Class III, spot prices: .8000-.9600.

The following are the June 2001 Class and component prices under the Federal Milk Order pricing system: Class II $16.05 (up $.33 from April), Class III $15.02 (up $1.19); and Class IV $15.33 (up $.29). Product price averages used in computing Class prices are: butter $1.9263, NDM $1.0148, cheese $1.6211, and dry whey $.2764. The Class II butterfat price is $2.2159 and the Class III/IV butterfat price is $2.2089.

An early-week cold front broke the heat wave that plagued the Northeast most of last week. Milder temperatures currently prevail, but milk output is still dropping through the region. In the Southeast, the milk flow is still easing lower, but at a slower pace. Following typical summer patterns, butterfat and protein tests on incoming milk are falling. Bottled milk sales are reported as poor throughout much of the East. In scattered areas, first-of-the-month orders are slightly improved. Surplus milk volumes are lighter and manufacturing plants are operating on slightly reduced schedules. Florida handlers are still shipping some milk out of state. A year ago at his time, Florida's exports had dipped to almost zero and imports began in late July.

The Fourth of July holiday falling in the middle of a week does disrupt demand and processing schedules, but most contacts see few problems in clearing any extra milk that may show up.

The condensed skim market is mostly steady. Demand is fair to good and supplies are more than adequate to meet those needs. Some operations did temporarily restart their dryers to clear some of their excess condensed skim. Also, some did clear to Midwest plants.

The fluid cream market is firm. Supplies are tighter and demand is often improved. Spot prices are about steady. The CME weekly average for butter is up fractionally and multiples are occasionally higher. Some cream buyers are looking at Western suppliers to supplement their regular sources. Ice cream output is steady to heavier now that summer is in full swing. Sales of soft serve mix, ices, sherbet, and frozen novelties are all improving along seasonal patterns. Cream cheese output is steady to slightly heavier. Churning activity is limited.

OPINION

Things Of Value

Editor's Note: The following editorial was written by Scott M. Barao, University of Maryland extension livestock specialist, and appeared in the Animal Agriculture Update Newsletter for May-June 2001.

The recent passing of a friend and cattle producer, Mr. John Mazur, has triggered a number of thoughts and memories.

John was overall a very private person, but he always took time to share his many talents in a number of ways. I met John in the late 1980s when he joined the Maryland Cattlemen's Association board of directors. John served on the board for six years, two as president. He made many important contributions toward the early growth and development of both our cattlemen's association and beef council. John and I grew to be friends and fishing buddies and I will miss him.

Mixed together with my thoughts and memories of John have been reflections on the circumstances which led me to Maryland and to my position as a livestock extension specialist.

Someone asked me recently what was the best part of my job. The answer came quickly and easily. Far and away, the best part of my job is the opportunity I am afforded to meet and work directly with beef cattle producers and families across Maryland. I count my blessings frequently for the many cattle producers and farm families I have grown to know, respect, and count among my friends over the last 15 years.

My comfort with and attraction to this fine group of folks is largely based on a common thread I have observed across the group. Simply stated, the thread is a commitment to "service." I watch you give so freely of your time to sit on boards, lead 4-H youth groups, attend meetings, coordinate events, chair committees, and share your talents and gifts enthusiastically. These are things of value.

You have taught me many things and I am a better person today because of the interactions I have had with so many of you. I have observed your leadership skills and I have learned more about courage, character, conviction, and compassion than I ever thought possible. These are things of value.

Your true commitment to service sets you apart from the crowd. I believe in my heart that those who are happiest and feel most fulfilled are those who have sought and found how to serve. What greater value exists than to become a servant to the unfolding and flowering of others. Thank you!

To Learn About No-Till Farming

Soil erosion is still a significant problem on many farms in Lancaster County.

Two field days have been planned which will focus on using no-till practices when farming with horses. The first day event is planned July 12 from 9:15 a.m.-12:30 p.m. at the A. K. and John Stoltzfus farm at 214 Peach Bottom Road, Peach Bottom. The second event will be July 20, also from 9:15 a.m.-12:30 p.m., at the David Stolzfus farm at 462 Whitehorse Road, Gap. For more details, call the Lancaster County Extension Office at (717)-394-6851.

To Monitor Alfalfa For Potato Leafhopper Infestation

The potato leafhopper is the most destructive insect pest to alfalfa in Pennsylvania. It reduces yield, quality (especially lower protein content), and shortens the life of the alfalfa stand. The stress to alfalfa caused by the leafhopper can result in increased root rot and stand failure. This is especially true in new seedings.

This pest does not overwinter in Pennsylvania but moves into the state on storm fronts from the south in late May or early June. Therefore we escape leafhopper damage on the first cutting but it is new spring seedings and the second and third cuttings that receive most of the damage.

Potato leafhoppers are pale yellowish green, slightly wedge-shaped, have wings and are only about ⅛ of an inch long. The nymphs are similar in appearance to the adults except that they are smaller, have no wings, and are yellow to cream colored with the possibility of a slight tinge of green.

Eggs are deposited in the stems and leaf veins. In warm weather, it takes only three weeks to develop from an egg to an adult. Therefore large populations can build up quickly. The adults are very active and fly above the plants when disturbed. The nymphs are also active and will quickly move, usually sideways, when disturbed. Although potato leafhoppers can be found in your field from late May until frost, most of the damage is done from mid-June until mid-August.

Both the adults and nymphs feed on the plants. They insert their mouth parts into the plant tissue to extract plant juices. This feeding process distorts and causes blockage of the tiny tubes that distribute the nutrients within the plant. This blockage causes the typical leafhopper injury: triangular-shaped yellowing of the leaves and stunting of the plants commonly referred to as "hopper burn." Stunted plants do not recover even after the leafhoppers have been controlled.

To protect your alfalfa crop from damage, monitor the situation in your fields. In a square-shaped field, monitor in a "U"-shaped pattern; while in a rectangular field, an "I"-shaped pattern is the best. In each field, select five sample sites along the "U" or "I" shape. Use an insect net with a 15-inch diameter hoop and a tightly knit bag such as muslin.

Within each of the five sample sites, make 20 sweeps with the net while walking in a zigzag pattern. Don't stop swinging the net until each of the 20 sweeps are completed. Sweep the net about 3-4 inches below the tops of the plants.

After completing the 20 sweeps in the first site, continue to swing the net back and forth a few times to force the insects into the small end of the bag. Grab the net quickly about 10 inches from the small end to trap the insects in a rather small area.

The difficult part is identifying and counting the potato leafhoppers. Count all the pale green adults (disregard any brown ones) and the nymphs. Slowly open the net and be alert for adults that can leave the net quickly without being noticed. After counting is complete, make note of the total. Then repeat this procedure at the next four sites. This will complete 100 sweeps.

Now calculate the number of leafhoppers per sweep. For example, if you collected a total of 60 leafhoppers, divide 60 by 100 for an average of 0.6 leafhoppers per sweep. When the number is very high (40 or more per 20 sweeps) at the first site, there is little need to spend anymore time sampling the other four sites in the field.

To Determine The Economic Injury Threshold For Your Alfalfa Field

A number of factors need to be considered when determining if spraying to control the leafhopper population is justified. The first factor is the number of leafhoppers present in the field. The second factor is the development of the plants. A relatively low number of leafhoppers can inflict a serious amount of damage if they are present when the plants are small.

Greatest losses to the alfalfa crop from leafhopper feeding occur before the plants reach six inches in height. Plants 12 inches and taller can tolerate leafhopper feeding without high losses resulting.

The third factor to consider is the value of the crop. The higher the value of the crop, the lower the economic injury threshold will be. Thus, with an equal pest population, spray application will be more profitable on a crop of higher value. The final factor to consider is the cost of the control to be applied.

The variability in each of these factors shows why the economic injury threshold is not a simple number. A publication entitled "A Pest Management Program for Alfalfa In Pennsylvania" is available from your county extension office. Consult the charts in this publication for assistance in determining the economic threshold for your alfalfa crop.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

GOD, WHAT DO YOU WANT?

Background Scripture:
Amos 4 Through 5.
Devotional Reading:
Malachi 1:6-14.

How the people of Israel look forward to The Day of the Lord, the time when God would smite all their enemies and make Israel prominent among the nations. They saw it as a time of recognition and reward, and they could hardly wait. It would mean vindication for them and judgment for others. If that's the deal, who wouldn't want it?

But Amos told the people of Israel that was not the deal. The judgment they so desired for other nations would fall upon them as well. "Woe to you who desire the day of the Lord! Why would you have the day of the Lord? It is darkness, and not light" (5:18).

It is bad, not good news. For, like their neighbors, they too will be judged by God and the results of it will be disastrous.

But how can that be? They are such dutiful Israelites. They bring their sacrifices to the temple every morning. Wow! Every three days they bring tithes. Wow again! They also cough up freewill offerings. Wow to the third power! So, why shouldn't they eagerly anticipate the day of the Lord? God, what do you want from us?

Unanswered Messages

It's not that God hasn't warned them. God has been sending them messages which they haven't heeded: "cleanness of teeth in all your cities" (food has been in short supply), and rain has been withheld, spoiling the harvest. He also sent blight and mildew and devastated their gardens and fig and olive trees. He sent them pestilence, political upheaval, and military losses.

But they ignored all these signs: "Therefore thus I will do to you, O Israel . . . prepare to meet your God, O Israel!" (4:12). And don't think that your rituals and financial support at the temple are going to get you off the hook. In fact, "The Lord God has sworn by his holiness that, behold, the days are coming upon you, when they shall take you away with hooks, even the last of you with fishhooks" (4:2).

God's judgment will not be a slap on the wrist: "The city that went forth a thousand shall have a hundred left, and that which went forth a hundred shall have ten left to the house of Israel" (5:3) This will happen, not because they haven't come frequently enough to the temple nor given enough in their offerings, but because of the way they treat others: "Therefore because you trample upon the poor and take from him exactions of wheat, you have built houses of hewn stone, but you shall not dwell in them; you have planted pleasant vineyards, but you shall not drink their wine" (5:11).

What They Lacked

The people of Israel — at least the upper class — have power and wealth. What they do not have is God's approval: "For I know how many are your transgressions, and how great are your sins — you who afflict the righteous, who take a bribe, and turn aside the needy in the gate" (5:12).

Religious rituals will not do it. "I hate, I despise your feasts, and I take no delight in your solemn assemblies" (But Lord, that's what we thought it was all about!) "Even though you offer me your burnt offerings and cereal offerings, I will not accept them."

"Take away from me the noise of your songs, to the melody of your harps I will not listen" (5:21-23).

So, if their power and wealth will not save them, what will? God, what do you want from us? The reply of Amos is unambiguous: "But let justice roll down like waters, and righteousness like an ever-flowing stream" (5:24).

In other words, what God really wants is for them to stop ignoring the plight of the poor, to cease exploiting the weak, to refrain from cheating the powerless, and to end their corruption of justice.

So, what about feasts, solemn assemblies, tithes, and offerings? They are only the icing on the cake. Render justice and compassion and then your rituals and offerings will be pleasing in God's sight. But not before!

"the other eight days," on the farm, where he admits his heart is.

"He says he feels more tired from a day in the office than from working around on the farm," said son Steve.

A Pasture Operation

A purebred Angus operation of 40 registered brood cows, Glen Oak Farm consists of 275 acres — 70 acres in permanent pasture parceled into 15 paddocks. The animals are on the paddocks for one week before the area gets three weeks of rest in Heim's grazing system.

The cows are bred mostly with natural breeding and the heifers with AI. Heim is working to breed easy-calving cows that produce calves with strong weaning and yearling weights on their grass-based system. He relies on AHIR Performance Records as a breeding managment tool.

When the calves are weaned in the fall, Heim selects calves to be used as registered breeding stock and sends the remainder to Lancaster County feedlots.

One challenge is the 60 acres located one side and the remainder of the land on the other side of a road. Clover and perennials are broadcast in the spring, as the seeds "hoofed in" by cows churning the soil with their hooves. The extremely rocky acres are no-tilled with alfalfa and orchardgrass.

Heim offered suggestions in tilling methods, seedstock, and his ideas about a variety of grasses for differing conditions.

On the farm, for example, he deals with shallow soils on the hillsides which may dry in the hot summer.

Although the area is ideal for cow/calf pairs, the surrounding woods makes deer pressure a problem, according to Heim. The woods do, however, provide shade in every pasture.

A purebred Angus operation of 40 registered brood cows, Glen Oak Farm consists of 275 acres — 70 acres in permanent pasture parceled into 15 paddocks. The animals are on the paddocks for one week before the area gets three weeks of rest in Heim's grazing system.

Reclaiming Land

Recently Heim expanded the operation by purchasing 185 acres of pastures, cropland, and cattle barns of land formerly owned by the Devereux foundation.

He was able to show visitors the results of the family's work at reclaiming the land back into production after 15 years of neglect.

After acquiring the land, Heim went to work clearing the overgrown bittersweet, multiflora rose, and other weeds. He maintains the fencelines with a grass to ensure the grass takes over the vacant soil.

"If the grass takes over, I don't have to spray every year," said Heim.

After taking dumpsters of barbed wire off of the land, Heim fenced the perimeter of the area with high tensile fencing.

Additionally, cutting a road through the woods created a way to move into the new pastureland and avoid the road.

On the former Devereaux land, the Heims cleared the rocks to the side of the pasture, added an animal handling facility, and put in 800 tons of slag stone, 18 inches thick, in the cattle barn area where he plans to winter the heifers.

The overgrown areas of the newly-acquired land, neglected for 15 years, will be cleared, subdivided, and grazed. The animals will finish clearing brush, as evidenced by the work the cattle have already done on the pasture on the left.

Underground water was already in place, so Heim replaced a few parts, flushed the lines, and began to use the equipiment.

The "bush" areas, as Heim dubbed them, will be cleared, subdivided, and grazed. The animals will finish the work to keep the area clear and create a new pasture for the operation.

"It's amazing what they (the cows) eat. They'll eat the weeds or underneath rose bushes," he said.

He hopes to expand to 80-90 head.

National Feeder Cattle Weekly Summary

St. Joseph, Mo.
June 29, 2001
Report Supplied By USDA

FEEDER CATTLE: Receipts this week 181,500; last week 148,900; last year 153,800. Compared to last week, feeder steers and heifers prices were unevenly steady on heavier receipts. Most areas were able to hold their market together, even after last Friday's grizzly bear of a cattle-on-feed report. However, many Southeastern sales turned lower as fleshy new-crop calves pressured the market and order buyers had little time to prepare loads to ship before next week's holiday. But, for the most part, feeder prices showed amazing strength by not heading straight south on the news that May feedlot placements were sharply higher than most had predicted. Even futures prices managed to hold up, until Friday when lower beef demand and higher corn bids caused sharp losses.

Last week's report pressure may have actually helped this week's cash feeder cattle trading. Producers were much easier to negotiate with and direct country trading was very active, especially for fall delivery. Sellers also like to sew-up deals before a big video auction, where out-front markets usually become set in stone. This weekend's Superior Video Auction features over 200,000 head and evidently many cattle feeders continue to be optimistic. Calves for September and October delivery are especially active in early sales with several strings of 400-500 lb steers in the Mountain States bringing from 120.00-130.00.

Most of the Plains and the Midwest have been dry and sunny for the past several days and wheat harvest is again making good progress. Next week, marketings will be very light as most markets will be closed for July 4th. However, more downside pressure may come for feeders as the corn market finally got a shot in the arm when Friday's USDA report showed slightly less June acreage than expected.

In other news, the beef checkoff program, which has been partly credited for the recent turnaround in consumer beef demand, may be on shaky ground after the Supreme Court set a precedent by deciding that the mandatory mushroom checkoff violates the First Amendment. This week's reported feeder cattle supply included 54 percent over 600 lbs.

National Dairy Market At A Glance

Madison, Wis.
June 29, 2001
Report Supplied By USDA

National Dairy Market at a glance for the period of June 25-29, 2001.

CHICAGO MERCANTILE EXCHANGE (CME) CASH MARKETS (06/15): BUTTER: Grade AA closed at $2.0000. The weekly average for Grade AA is $2.0067 (+.0042).

CHEESE: Barrels closed at $1.6100 and blocks at $1.6575. The weekly average for barrels is $1.5930 (-.0345) and blocks, $1.6675 (+.0400).

NONFAT DRY MILK: Extra Grade closed at $1.0300 and Grade A closed at $1.0400. The weekly average for Extra Grade is $1.0300 (N.C.) and Grade A, $1.0400 (N.C.).

BUTTER: Butter markets remain firm. Butter stocks are building on a weekly basis, although they continue to trail last year's level. Imported butter continues to arrive on U.S. shores to supplement local production. Current imports, subject to licensing requirements and high-tier (above quota) levels, are sharply higher versus 2000. Australia and New Zealand are the major sourcing countries. During January May, 2001, licensed butter imports totaled 8.4 million pounds compared to 4.5 million pounds during the comparable period in 2000. High-tier imports total 2.5 million pounds compared to 33,695 pounds during the same five month period last year. Buying interest is fair at best with most orders being places for short term or immediate needs. More butter handlers are speculating that overall butter sales are slowing due to current price levels.

CHEESE: The cheese market is unsettled to weak. Bulk cheese needs and finished product deliveries are expected to be reduced by the Independence Day holiday next week. Process cheese movement is typically stronger than natural. Many plants have an uncommitted load or two available for sale while others are hard pressed to meet orders. Cheese production is showing seasonal declines, reflecting lower milk intakes and reduced cheese yields. Any extra milk generated over the holiday will be welcomed by plants operating on diminished schedules.

FLUID MILK: Milk production is declining through most, if not all, of the country due to summer heat, as well as humidity and biting insects. California has cooled off and a rebound in receipts is expected if conditions continue. Class I sales are at average to slow summer levels. Manufacturing schedules are generally lighter as the total milk volumes decline. Dryer efficiencies are also lower in summer and plant capacity is reduced. Florida continues to export surplus milk to nearby regions though handlers are preparing to start importing fairly soon. Recent rains in the Pacific Northwest are doing little long term to alleviate the drought but are helping current crop conditions. Plans for handling any extra holiday surplus milk are underway but limited extra volumes are expected to be generated.

DRY PRODUCTS: The NDM market is unsettled as buyers and sellers sort out demand and needs at various prices. This week, the first offerings of NDM were made at the new, lower CCC purchase price of $.90 per pound. Also, exporters are waiting for the new DEIP year allocations, that will start July 1. Drying schedules are steady to lower as milk volumes decline seasonally. Some additional high heat product is being produced. The buttermilk market is fairly steady with offerings limited due to increased sales of condensed and reduced churning. The whey market is steady to firm and production is lighter. More buyers are limiting purchases to needs. The WPC market is steady. Buyers are limiting purchases to current needs. Recent CCC off-condition NDM sale activity is continuing to affect demand as buyers look for cheaper sources of animal feed ingredients.

CCC: During the week of June 25 - 29, CCC purchased 15,923,797 pounds of Western and 359,080 pounds of Midwestern nonfortified NDM.

CLASS AND COMPONENT PRICES (DAIRY PROGRAMS): The following are the June 2001 prices under the Federal Milk Order pricing system: Class II $16.05 ($0.33), Class III $15.02 ($1.19); and Class IV $15.33 ($0.29). Product price averages used in computing Class prices are: butter $1.9263, NDM $1.0148, cheese $1.6211, and dry whey $.2764. The Class II butterfat price is $2.2159 and the Class III/IV butterfat price is $2.2089. Further information may be found at: www.ams.usda.gov/dairy/mib/classprcacnmt.pdf.

USDA Launches New Website On Food Safety Research Programs

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The USDA recently launched a new Website (http://www.nal.usda.gov/fsrio) aimed at providing a database of food safety research projects to the research community and the general public. The Website provides detailed information on food safety research projects, spending, and accomplishments by U.S. Federal agencies, along with links to other important food safety research information.

"This Website is a tool that researchers and policy makers can use to examine research needs and priorities in food safety," said Agriculture Secretary Ann M. Veneman. "The goal is to measure the progress of our food safety research and continue efforts to educate the public about these important issues."

The searchable database provides information on nearly 500 food safety research projects dating from 1998 to the present including research done or funded by: USDA Agricultural Research Service; USDA Cooperative State Research, Education, and Extension Service; the Food Safety Consortium (researchers from the University of Arkansas, Iowa State University, and Kansas State University); and the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services' Food and Drug Administration.

Also on the Website are:

- Program and planning information, as well as various food safety reports;
- Food safety news and information; and
- More than 100 links to Web-based food safety research information provided by U.S. and foreign governments, and educational and professional organizations.

The new Website was created by the Food Safety Research Information Office at USDA's National Agricultural Library with information from related government food safety agencies. The National Agricultural Library, part of the Agricultural Research Service, is the world's largest and most accessible agricultural research library, and the principal resource in the U.S. for information about food, agriculture, and natural resources.

New Ag Institute To Educate, Promote Public Understanding with guns alone," he said, noting that nations have become subject to other nations because they lacked a viable agriculture.

"While agriculture remains our leading industry in the commonwealth, so much is changing," Hayes said. "Our progress from this point will determine how we transition agriculture in the new millenium. Understanding our past can help ease this transition to Pennsylvania's future."

To illustrate changes in agriculture in the last century, Hayes pointed out that two percent of our population is now farming to feed the other 98 percent — compared to 35 percent feeding the other 65 percent 100 years ago.

Partners in the new institute include the Landis Valley Associates ("friends" of the museum) and the Agricultural Coalition of Pennsylvania, a committee composed of agribusiness leaders in PennAg Industries Association.

Rep. Jere Strittmatter, (R-Lancaster), honorary director of the LVA and one of the developers of the institute, emphasized the importance of education as it relates to public policy.

"We need to do a better job of interrelating our educational and agricultural resources. Education is vital becasue the shaping of public policy relies on an informed citizenry," he said. "Agriculture is rapidly evolving but few Pennsylvanians understand how it relates to their life."

Calling the agricultural museum at Landis Valley "the best in the world," largely because of the preservation of surrounding farmland. Strittmatter said he looks forward to working with the new institute on scholarly findings related to "news-breaking topics affecting advanced agriculture and Pennsylvania."

According to Wenger, the first step of the institute will be to develop a steering committee composed of agricultural representatives, the historical and educational communities, government, farmland interest, and other partners to establish the institute model.

"We will strive for sound, balanced, and effective educational projects that meet the criteria for accuracy and academic excellence," Wenger said.

Others present at the launch of the new project included state senator Noah Wenger, PHMC executive director Brent Glass, the Hans Herr chapter of the FFA, and farmland preservation representatives from various counties.

The Landis Valley Museum is a 100-acre, living history farm and agricultural facility, featuring original farmsteads dating to the early 1800s, historic breeds of plants and animals, and demonstrations of traditional skills such as basketmaking and tinsmithing.

Summer Institute Provides Cooperative Experience To FFA

selling sodas, gum sales, jail bails, picnic games such as a water balloon toss, and even taping a leader to the wall raised money for their four cooperatives. Students must also keep records of the money transacted, said Stoltzfus.

Additionally skits, discussions, role-plays, and an off-campus tour of a local agribusiness offered a chance for students to experience the inner workings of a cooperative. They also went through a fictional interviewing process after discussing what makes an applicant desirable to an employer.

The institute gave scholars the opportunity to write, speak and participate in discussion as they reviewed bylaws, elected officers, and mapped out ideas to generate cash.

Hal Doran, Boalsburg, was involved full-time as institute director for 26 years and spent most of his life in cooperatives. Doran was also instrumental in designing the state-level program.

"I think the fact that this program has lasted 40 years confirms that a lot of people over many years have put together something helpful and valuable," said Doran.

"The staff is mainly volunteers who have special interests and resources to plan and work the event," said Doran, who estimates that six to eight different areas of expertise are needed to give the students a well-rounded education.

"The resource people bring different talent to different parts of the program," said Doran. "It works nicely because usually the resource people have been students once or twice in the past and have an interest in young people and in farming enterprises. It's a nice combination that all works together to maximize the experience."

Goals of the experience, according to Doran, include both academic and character growth. In the academic category, students gain knowledge and appreciation of business enterprise systems not taught in depth in school, said Doran, as they learn the value of cooperatives for both the producer and the consumer.

Besides academics, however, said Doran, leadership skills and character building are also important products of time spent in the institute.

Stoltzfus said that "the institute allows us to teach leadership by involvement. Instead of sitting and taking notes, it puts the students in the situation where they have to lead."

Students are from areas all over Pennsylvania, giving "a different community mix that builds on 4-H and FFA experience," he said. "It's interesting to see the group in the matter of hours become one group."

Several hundred people are involved in the regional program which raises money locally, from councils across the state, to sponsor the students.

Team-building activities, a square dance, a DJ dance, variety show, and picnic also gave the students a time to enjoy building friendships with their peers.

Many students were already selected from students in their area, since smaller, local conferences are conducted across Pennsylvania.

The institute closed with an awards banquet where many scholars gave short presentations on highlights of the seminar. Also awards for the theme poster, variety show, game show, and various leadership and achievement awards were given out. In addition scholarship winners were announced.

The scholarship winners were selected to go to the National Institute for Cooperative Education (NICE) meeting conducted later this summer in Atlanta, Ga., which includes 400-500 students from all over the United States.

Pork Organizations Separate

program restructuring required.

The Pork Board will have approximately two years to demonstrate to producers and importers the value of the checkoff program to the industry.

USDA will conduct a survey by June 2003 to determine whether 15 percent of producers and importers are in favor of conducting a referendum to decide continuation of the checkoff program.

If the required number of producers and importers request a referendum, the referendum would then be held within one year.

Restructuring

The restructuring requires the National Pork Board to:

- Employ its own management and staff, including the chief executive officer and chief financial officer
- Manage separate contracts for promotion, research, and consumer information projects
- Maintain separate office operations from the NPPC
- Maintain separate communications from the NPPC.

National Pork Board

On the National Pork Board Website, the organization posted a release which states that the board will continue to focus on checkoff-funded programs following the official separation from the NPPC, which had been its general contractor. The board is based in Des Moines, Iowa.

"The pork checkoff settlement agreement announced Feb. 28 has resulted in significant changes for the National Pork Board. We must continue to provide the checkoff-funded programs required by law but now will manage them directly rather than through a general contractor.

"We now have our own location, our own accounting system and our own staff," explained John Kellogg, president of the National Pork Board and a pork producer from Yorkville, Ill.

"These are business decisions that took time. We still have details to work out, such as hiring a chief executive officer and a chief financial officer."

Plans to select a CEO are underway, with a candidate expected to be identified in early September. Once the CEO is selected, the hiring of a chief financial officer will take place. Changes to separate accounting, staff and locations occurred on July 1.

NPPC

The NPPC, based in Washington, D.C., says it will concentrate on an ambitious legislative and regulatory agenda that includes trade policy, the environment, food safety, animal health, biosecurity issues, and the upcoming Farm Bill.

"Pork producers continue to set policy for the NPPC, which now will focus on legislative and regulatory issues that impact the economic viability of pork producers and the pork industry," said NPPC President Barb Determan, a pork producer from Early, Iowa.

"Whether it's securing resources for conservation technical assistance in the Farm Bill or fighting for funding to upgrade the animal disease research facility at Ames, Iowa, NPPC will be leading the charge.

"Pork producers will continue to work aggressively with the U.S. government to open new markets for U.S. pork and thereby help ensure a brighter future for our producers," Determan said.

"Pork exports have doubled since 1994, but there are still many countries that deny U.S. pork imports through high tariffs or non tariff barriers."

NPPC will continue working closely with its members the 44 state pork producer associations.

During the last joint National Pork Industry Forum in March, delegates voted to create a task force to create the future structure of the National Pork Producers Council.

The Task Force has met and continues to move forward with the restructuring of NPPC as required by the delegates.

MPPA

The Michigan Pork Producers Association (MPPA) "sought an injunction in January contending that USDA had no legal authority to conduct a binding referendum. Moreover, the USDA's referendum was filled with irregularities and failed to apply consistent standards," said Pete Blauwiekel, Fowler, Mich, pork producer.

"Through this settlement, we have been able to help pork producers across the U.S. maintain their access to promotion, research and education funded by the checkoff. We believe that USDA's participation in the Settlement Agreement reflects their genuine concerns regarding the referendum and the way it was conducted."

Additional information about the settlement and related issues is available at (http://www.ams.usda.gov/lsg/mpb/pork.htm).

Pennsylvania Kicks Off 2001 'Simply Delicious' Season

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — On behalf of Gov. Tom Ridge, Agricultural Secretary Sam Hayes recently kicked off the 2001 Pennsylvania produce season and launched the state's "Pennsylvania Produce...Simply Delicious" marketing campaign.

To assist in the promotion of Pennsylvania produce, more than 900 supermarkets ranging from independently owned stores and small grocery chains to large corporate retailers have agreed to feature Pennsylvania produce.

More than 600 growers are registered to provide wholesalers and retailers locally grown produce.

To help spread the "Simply Delicious" message, store promotion items such as price cards, banners, posters, and "Simply Delicious" graphics are available for those who participate in the program.

Hayes said the department has added a new initiative this year — "rolling billboards,' or posters on the side of trucks — to spread the message of Pennsylvania's bounty.

"Gov. Ridge and I are proud of the hard work of our dedicated farmers and growers that has resulted in the high quality of Pennsylvania's produce," Hayes said. "We encourage all Pennsylvanians to look for the 'Simply Delicious' logo at their favorite store or farmer's market."

Pennsylvania's "Simply Delicious" logo is designed to increase consumer awareness and sales of Pennsylvania's fresh homegrown fruits and vegetables. The department of agriculture, in cooperation with Pennsylvania Vegetable Marketing and Research Program and Pennsylvania Food Merchants Association, sponsors "Simply Delicious."

For more information about the Pennsylvania Produce "Simply Delicious" program, contact the Bureau of Market Development at (717) 787-4210 or through the Department of Agriculture's homepage through the PA PowerPort at www.state.pa.us, or directly at www.pda.state.pa.us.

June 1 Hog and Pig Inventory Slightly Below Year Ago, 1% Above March 1, 2001

WASHINGTON, D.C.—(USDA-NASS)—U.S. inventory of all hogs and pigs on June 1, 2001, was 59.1 million head. This was slightly below June 2000, but 1 percent above March 1, 2001.

Breeding inventory, at 6.20 million head, was down 1 percent from June 1, 2000, and down 1 percent from March 1, 2001. Market hog inventory, at 52.9 million head, was slightly below last year, but 1 percent above last quarter.

The March-May 2001 U.S. pig crop, at 25.5 million head, was slightly less than 2000, and 3 percent less than 1999. Sows farrowing during this period totaled 2.88 million head, slightly below last year. The sows farrowed during this quarter represented 46 percent of the breeding herd.

The average pigs per litter was 8.88 pigs saved per litter for the March-May 2001 period, compared to 8.86 pigs last year. Pigs saved per litter by size of operation ranged from 7.60 for operations with 1-99 hogs to 9.00 for operations with more than 5,000 hogs and pigs.

U.S. hog producers intend to have 2.92 million sows farrow during the June-August 2001 quarter, 1 percent above the actual farrowings during the same period in 2000, and slightly above 1999. Intended farrowings for September-November, at 2.91 million sows, are 2 percent above the same period in both 2000 and 1999.

The total number of hogs under contract, owned by operations with over 5,000 head, but raised by contractees, accounted for 35 percent of the total U.S. hog inventory, up from 32 percent last year.

Revisions: All inventory and pig crop estimates for June 2000 through March 2001 were reviewed using final pig crop, official slaughter, death loss, import, and export data in U.S. level balance sheets. Based on the findings of this review, small adjustments of less than one half percent were made to the inventory level for June 1, 2000, September 1, 2000, December 1, 2000 and March 1, 2001. A small adjustment of less than one half percent was made to the December 2000-February 2001 pig crop.

USDA Announces Improvements To Livestock Mandatory Price Reporting

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The USDA announced recently a series of improvements to be made in USDA's Livestock Mandatory Price Reporting Program to ensure more accurate and complete collecting, disseminating and reporting of market data by the Agricultural Marketing Service (AMS).

"The review by our team outlines several important measures that USDA will begin taking immediately to ensure the effectiveness and reliability of these programs," said USDA Secretary Ann M. Veneman. "It is important that we continue to build and maintain a system of checks and balances to prevent any potential error in reporting."

On May 18, Secretary Veneman assigned a team of experts to review the program after inaccurate reports for boxed beef carcass values were released during its first six weeks in operation. The team submitted its report, outlining key findings and recommendations as follows:

There was a programming error and inadequate testing done prior to and after April 2 to ensure accuracy of reports. To correct this, AMS will now parallel test the data to experience a wide range of reporting conditions; work with livestock/meat industry to develop realistic validation data sets; use validation data sets to test any change in programming; test all changes on test systems and develop additional procedures to ensure correct input data.

The audit surveillance plan for ensuring the accuracy of data being submitted is behind schedule and needs improvement. To correct this, AMS will accelerate the audit process, change job hiring specifications, seek additional personnel details or utilize other agency personnel for audit purposes.

Confidentiality provisions are preventing release of a significant portion of information, and requires change. The Department will move forward on an alternative confidentiality standard to the 3/60 which will apply confidentiality standards to data collected over a multi-day period rather than the current several hour collection period.

Cow-calf operators and feedlots incurred financial losses totaling $15-$25 million, while losses to packers and futures traders are undetermined. Because producer losses are an indirect effect of the misreported data, loss estimates may vary widely, depending on assumptions used to develop the estimates. The review team found that USDA is not liable for any losses incurred and has no authority to make compensation payments as a result of the misreported data. The review team did not recommend that USDA support legislation to provide payment to producers.

"The change in this reporting structure under the new law was a huge undertaking that fundamentally changed the reporting system," said USDA chief economist Keith Collins. "Through these recommendations, our dedicated team of employees will have more effective tools to ensure collectively the continued integrity of the system."

On April 2, AMS began collecting and disseminating livestock market information under the Livestock Mandatory Reporting Act of 1999. The new law required substantial changes to the reporting program, including nearly doubling the number of required reports and releasing reports in a more expeditious manner. Under the program, larger packers and importers are required to report to USDA the details of all transactions involving purchases of livestock and imported boxed lamb cuts, and the details of all transactions involving domestic and export sales of boxed beef cuts, sales of domestic and imported boxed lamb cuts, and sales of lamb carcasses.

ASA Seeks Conservation Legacy Awards Nominees

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — The American Soybean Association (ASA) is seeking nominees for the 2002 Conservation Legacy Awards. The Conservation Legacy Program is a national program designed to recognize the outstanding environmental and conservation achievements of U.S. soybean farmers. Along with ASA, the program is co-sponsored by Monsanto and Soybean Digest, an Intertec/Primedia publication.

A national selection committee; composed of soybean farmers, conservationists, and natural resource professionals, will evaluate all nominations based on each farmer's environmental and economic program.

One ASA member actively engaged in soybean production will be selected from each of the following four regions: western, southern, midwestern and northeastern. One national winner will be selected from the regional winners, based on the nomination form and on-farm visits to each regional winner's farm.

All four regional winners and a spouse/guest will receive a trip to Commodity Classic, the annual joint convention of the American Soybean Association and National Corn Growers Association, Feb. 21-23, 2002, at the Opryland Hotel in Nashville, Tenn. The national winner will also receive a plaque and yard sign and will be featured in a special Soybean Digest article.

Nomination forms for the 2002 Conservation Legacy Awards program are available by calling (800) 688-7692 or on ASA's electronic community, www.SoyGrowers.com. Nominations should be returned to ASA by July 15.

Nebraska To Host National Angus Conference And Tour

NORTH PLATTE, Neb. — Angus breeders and commercial cattle producers from across the United States are invited to attend the 2001 National Angus Conference and Tour, set for September 30-October 3, in North Platte, Neb.

"Leading the Angus Advance" is the theme for the four-day event, which includes a workshop program, two-day tour and one-day conference program.

A collection of speakers will discuss current topics ranging from the basics of production to emerging new technologies in the beef industry.

Dr. Bill Mies, Future Beef Operations and formerly of Texas A&M University, will deliver the keynote address.

"We've selected topics for the conference program that hit the heart of some of the beef industry's most prominent issues, said Richard L. Spader, executive vice president of the American Angus Association.

On Sunday, September 30, attendees have the opportunity to participate in two workshops and the "Basics of the Business Breed" program.

Scott Johnson, director of Angus Information Management Software (AIMS) will conduct a workshop geared to both new and experienced users.

Angie Denton, director of Web marketing for Angus Productions Inc. (API), will offer a Web marketing workshop on services API offers to producers for marketing their herd on the Web.

A new addition to this year's event is the "Basics of the Business Breed" program on Sunday evening, where association staff will conduct mini workshops for both new and experienced breeders.

John Crouch, director of performance programs, will discuss the basics of Angus Herd Improvement Records (AHIR), including how to determine contemporary groups, completing AHIR forms and the basics of sire evaluation.

Bryce Schumann, director of member services, will discuss the basics of herd identification and tips on how to complete forms and submit them to the association for trouble-free service.

The third session addresses member logon services available on the association's Web site and how more and more members are accessing their individual herd information, submitting registrations and doing other business with the association online.

The conference also features several tour stops at Angus operations in the area.

The conference program concludes the four-day event on Wednesday, October 3, and features some of the most influential speakers in the beef industry. In addition to Dr. Bill Mies, attendees will also hear from Dr. Bill Beal, Virginia Tech, on the basics of reproduction and Dr. Twig Marston, Kansas State University, on producing pounds, product and pregnancy.

The remainder of the morning program will begin with Dr. Dan Moser, Kansas State Univeristy, on the role of DNA in genetic improvement programs and continue with Bill Bowman, director of commercial relations for the American Angus Association, on meeting the technology needs of the commercial industry. James Henderson, B3R Meats, will conclude the morning program with a presentation on information flow and its importance to the beef business.

The final leg of the program will start with Dr. Doyle Wilson, Iowa State University, discussing the tools for designing a better end product. Tim Schiefelbein, ConAgra Beef, will share insight on what the grids tell us and John Landry, SYSCO Inc., will talk about taking beef to the consumer.

Registration for the conference is $65 before the September 1 early registration deadline. Cost after the deadline and on site in North Platte is $80. To request a registration packet, contact Linda Campbell at (816) 383-5143. You can also register online at www.angus.org.

FEEDING PRACTICES THAT REDUCE HEAT STRESS
Tim Beck
Capital Region Dairy Program Coordinator

Hot summer temperatures with high humidity have reduced dry matter intake in many herds.

Previous columns have addressed evaporative cooling, body sprinkling and good air movement to improve the feeding area and entice cows to eat during hot weather.

Feed intake can be reduced 8-12 percent or more during hot weather, with production losses of 3-20 percent or more when temperatures go above 90 degrees. Cattle sweat only 10 percent as much as man, so the cow is challenged to reduce body temperature, and the panting behavior she exhibits increases her maintenance requirement by 20 percent.

Increased maintenance requirements and reduced volatile fatty acid production in the rumen during hot weather cause the cow to experience energy deficiency.

Feeding adjustments are needed to increase the nutrient density of the cow's diet without overfeeding starch or underfeeding fiber and minerals to maintain energy intake and electrolyte balance.

Because the cow is eating less dry matter, maintain adequate fiber intake to prevent acidosis problems. Neutral detergent fiber levels should be maintained at 28-30 percent of TRDM (total ration dry matter).

Watch butterfat test levels closely to avoid fat test depressiona classic sign of acidosis problems often resulting from insufficient NDF intake or excessive nonstructural carbohydrate. Consider feeding two to three pounds of good quality grass hay.

Since the cow is losing minerals, compensate for higher body losses. Potassium should be maintained at 1.5 percent of TRDM (total ration dry matter). To avoid excessive chloride (no more than .30-.35 percent TRDM), potassium carbonates may be the ingredient of choice.

Magnesium should be at .30 percent of TRDM and added sodium should be .50 to .60 percent of TRDM. This added sodium level can be achieved from salt fed at .50-.60 percent TRDM (39.3 percent sodium) or when less concentrated materials like sodium bicarbonate (27.3 percent sodium) or sesquicarbonate (28.2 percent sodium) are fed, the feeding rate must be .80 to 1.00 percent TRDM.

When dry matter intake is below 90 percent of normal intake, feed a higher fat ration to increase energy density. Do not exceed 5-7 percent of TRDM from all fat sources. Use unprotected fat such as oilseeds to reach the five percent fat level, and then consider protected fats to reach the higher seven percent fat in the TRDM.

Water is always the most essential nutrient, so consider adding extra water to the TMR, silage, or haylage if dry matter intake drops seriously. Cows prefer to drink warm water, but chilled drinking water can reduce body temperature when offered as the only source of water. Chilling water is probably unnecessary except where well water exceeds 86 degrees or where water can't be kept cool by shade.

Feeding times may also need to be adjusted during hot weather. Offer feeds during early morning hours from 4 a.m.-6 a.m. or late from 9 p.m.-10 p.m. Feed smaller amounts more frequently during the day.

Remember ensiled forages have shorter bunk life during hot weather. Do not remove forages from the silo in advance of feeding, and feed more frequently to prevent dry matter losses and heating in the bunk.

Finally, feed additives have been effective in some studies. Yeast culture or live cell yeast, niacin, dried brewers yeast, fat soluble vitamins (A, D, and E) and Aspergillus oryzae have all shown positive milk responses in some studies.

Cattle Feeders Summer Workshop Scheduled For July 26

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — Penn State Cooperative Extension and several cattle oriented agribusiness companies invite interested people to participate in the annual Cattle Feeders Summer Workshop scheduled for Thursday, July 26 at Yoder's Restaurant, New Holland. The event begins at 6 p.m. with a free ice cream social catered by the workshop sponsors, while the educational meeting gets under way at 7 p.m.

Because of the serious situations of respiratory sickness experienced by Pennsylvania cattle feeders last autumn, this year's workshop will focus on "Protecting the Health of Feeder Cattle."

In preparation for the workshop, Penn State Cooperative Extension conducted producer interviews on six Lancaster County farms to evaluate feeder cattle receiving and processing practices. Reports from the field during the last quarter of 2000 indicated unusually high mortalities and labor intensive treatments. So what went wrong?

At this year's summer workshop, the survey findings will be presented as "case scenarios" evaluating the differences, similarities, and effectiveness of feeder cattle receiving programs. Dr. Arlen Mills, Penn State Cooperative Extension Veterinarian based in Lebanon County, will present the "case scenarios." Before coming to Pennsylvania, Dr. Mills practiced veterinary medicine for 20 years in Ohio working with many beef producers.

An additional presentation on immunology will be offered by Dr. John Lynch, veterinarian with the Technical Services Group of Intervet, Inc. Dr. Lynch has 20 years of experience as a veterinary consultant with beef cow/calf, stocker, and feedlot operations in both the U.S. and Mexico.

Join us for a fun and educational evening! Yoder's Restaurant is located on Route 23 northeast of New Holland.

Penn State encourages persons with disabilities to participate in its programs and activities. If you anticipate needing any type of accommodation or have questions about the physical access provided, please contact Chet Hughes at (717) 394-6851 in advance of your participation or visit.

NEW INFORMATION AND TECHNOLOGY ENHANCING AGRICULTURE

A key component in achieving optimum yields in your fields is soil quality. Although Lancaster has rich soils and obtains high yields, we can not become complacent when new information and technology is discovered that enhances soil quality.

In an effort to highlight the latest farming practices, technology and equipment needed to help farmers positively impact their bottom line while respecting the environment, Cedar Meadow Farm has partnered with The Lancaster Chamber of Commerce and Industry, the Lancaster Conservation District, and the Pennsylvania Association of Sustainable Agriculture to offer the free 8th annual Farm Field Day Wednesday, July 25 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at Cedar Meadow Farm.

This year's theme is "Beyond Conservation — Exploring the Soil Food Web." The event will focus on how the soil can function at its optimal potential specifically on micromanagement levels.

The event is hosted by Steve Groff, owner of Cedar Meadow Farm, a nationally recognized expert on soil conservation and no-till farming. Along with the many local and national agriculture experts that will be sharing the latest farming techniques, there will be equipment demonstrations focused on conservation practices.

Three specific areas that will be highlighted at the event are: tillage and carbon loss, high tech irrigation scheduling and the unveiling of remote image sensing of crops, fields and farms.

Intensive tillage, primarily moldboard plowing, has caused significant decreases in soil carbon on a significant number of farms, which degrades soil properties vital for sustainable crop production.

Donald C. Reicosky, Soil Scientist for the USDA-ARS, North Central Conservation Research Laboratory, Morris, MN, will be speaking during the field day on conservation tillage tools and carbon dioxide loss.

Reicosky's research demonstrates that as soil carbon decreases, erosion and compaction increase, while infiltration and water-holding capacity decrease. Consequently, soil fertility decreases resulting in reduced crop growth.

Conservation tillage equipment is an important management tool for producers. It improves residue management and lowers carbon dioxide release when compared to moldboard plowing.

Reicosky will share his research data during the event along with local equipment companies that will be demonstrating conservation tillage and no-till equipment that preserves carbon in the soil.

The 21st century has brought about the use of electronic real-time soil moisture probes, real-time evapotranspiration and rainfall sensors to accurately schedule irrigation for optimal plant growth.

This technology can then be tied into real-time irrigation water control sensors, which automatically irrigates crops precisely when needed. Paltin International Inc., a company dealing with real-time water monitoring systems for irrigation scheduling, has been working with Steve Groff in monitoring soil water profile dynamics under irrigation and tillage methods using real-time soil moisture probes, real-time evapotranspiration and rainfall sensors.

The results of Cedar Meadow Farm's research and the equipment used will be on hand during the event.

The unveiling of a unique pilot project that utilizes wireless remote control helicopters and parafoils to shoot images of crops, fields and farms will be a new feature at this year's Farm Field Day. This aerial video photography can be used to detect the specific location of crop stress, insect infestations and nutrient deficiencies.

This technology will enable farmers to treat these affected areas, rather than the entire field. Bolar Heli Systems and Nutrient Solutions in Agriculture will conduct this exciting demonstration.

Some other learning stations that will be at the field day include: a rainfall simulator to determine soil erosion rates and phosphorus runoff, two soil pits, cover crop research, small scale organic no-till equipment, backhoe excavations immediately following deep tillage passages and a fiber crop research plot.

There will be over 30 exhibitors from the ag industry to showcase products and services. There will also be a stream exploration for children and fresh vegetables and food will also be available.

The 8th Annual Farm Field Day will be held on July 25 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at Cedar Meadow Farm, Holtwood, PA. There is no cost to attend and registration is not required. For directions or more information on the event, visit www.cedarmeadowfarm.com, or contact Brent Landis at The Lancaster Chamber at blandis@lcci.com or 717-397-3531, ext. 134.

Farmer Cooperatives Present Proposal To Aid Self-Help Efforts

WASHINGTON, D.C. — With American agriculture facing a number of long-term challenges, farmer-owned businesses are asking Congress to support cooperative self-help efforts designed to provide long-term support for the economic well being of this nation's farmers.

"The farmer's share of the consumer food dollar has declined to just 20 cents — its lowest level ever," David Graves, president and CEO of the National Council of Farmer Cooperatives (NCFC), recently told the House Committee on Agriculture's Subcommittee on Conservation, Credit, Rural Development and Research. "Increasing the farmer's share by just one cent to 21 cents would generate an additional $6 billion in total income. The challenge, of course, is how."

To that end, Graves presented the subcommittee with NCFC's legislative proposal. the Farmer Business and Income Opportunity Act. The proposed act, a product of NCFC's Farm Bill Task Force, seeks to increase the income that farmers receive from the marketplace by encouraging and supporting farmer-owned businesses. "To be successful," said Graves, "farmers and their cooperative businesses must be strategically positioned to be able to compete in what clearly is a rapidly changing global marketplace."

Key recommendations of NCFC's package include:

- Providing improved access to capital through credit and investment initiatives for farmer cooperatives. These include the modernization of the Business & Industry Loan Guarantee program, new tax incentives to encourage investment in cooperative businesses, and the creation of an equity capital fund for rural businesses, including farmer cooperatives.
- Clarifying tax laws relating to the organization and operation of farmer cooperatives. This action will allow farmers to benefit more from the value-added processing of their products.
- Revitalizing USDA research, education and technical assistance programs, including re-establishing a separate agency within USDA to encourage and support farmer cooperatives and strengthening of the Value-Added Technical Assistance Grants program.
- A Sense of Congress resolution to reaffirm support for farmer cooperatives and encourage and enhance the ability of farmers to join together in cooperative self-help efforts.

"We believe," testified Graves, "that enactment of this package would provide farmers with a greater opportunity to improve their income from the marketplace, better manage their risk, capitalize on potential market opportunities, and compete more effectively in a rapidly changing global economy."

USDA Reporting Error Results In $42-$54 Million Loss to Cattle Industry

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Cattle producers suffered a $42-54 million loss because of errors in USDA's price reporting system, the National Cattlemen's Beef Association (NCBA) said today.

"The economic estimates show that American cattle producers lost between $42 and $54 million between April 27 and May 18 because of a government reporting error," said Chuck Lambert, NCBA Chief Economist.

"While there is some question concerning when the injury actually occurred, it is clear that there were significant losses to many individual producers because of an inaccurate price formula."

The errors resulting in the loss occurred when prices were inaccurately calculated, under the USDA mandatory price reporting system that went into effect on April 2.

On May 16, USDA's Agriculture Marketing Service announced that prices for "no-roll" products had been incorporated into Choice and Select product prices reported nationwide. Price reports have been accurate since May 16.

Following the announcement of the error, NCBA commissioned two economic studies simultaneously, without consultation, by top economists from Virginia Tech and Kansas State University. See results of loss analysis at http://www.beef.org/newsroom/index.htm.

"Now that we have the economic analysis, we are in a better position to consider remedies and determine next steps," said NCBA President Lynn Cornwell and a cattle rancher from Glasgow, Montana.

"NCBA's primary objective is a fair and effective price reporting system," continued Cornwell. "There are many factors influencing the cattle market and a variety of ways to calculate the impact of those factors. We are sharing this data with state beef organizations now so that NCBA members can provide clear direction, based on the best available information, on how to proceed. We plan to consider all available options, including legal recourse and financial compensation, over the next few weeks."

USDA Marks 75th Anniversary Of Cooperative Programs

WASHINGTON, D.C. — During a ceremony held recently, the USDA recognized 75 years of providing research, education, information and technical assistance through Cooperative Services programs. USDA Secretary Ann M. Veneman was joined by former Secretary Earl Butz, as well as employees, former administrators, and other invited guests for the event.

"Our mission provides some valuable tools in the food and agriculture industry's toolbox to help them better compete in today's changing food system," said Veneman. "Seventy-five years after its creation, Cooperative Services recognizes these changes, and our employees are playing a major role in helping promote the opportunities that lie ahead in what promises to be a world of opportunity."

There are about 3,500 farmer-owned agricultural cooperatives in the nation today, which record about $72 billion per year in sales of crops and livestock and about $23 billion in farm supply sales. Co-ops help members market their products and, increasingly, add value to the products through further processing, as well as helping members obtain farm supplies and services at fair prices. Utility cooperatives use the same principles to bring quality electrical and telecommunications services to many rural and urban parts of the nation.

Earlier this week, USDA announced 28 grants totaling almost $10 million to promote development of value-added products. Nearly 25 percent of the grants were targeted to finding new energy solutions by utilizing raw agricultural commodities. A large majority of the grant recipients were cooperatives.

"We need to continue to think creatively to meet the challenges of this new marketplace in terms of how cooperatives operate," Veneman said. "This can be done by providing the kind of flexibility in our programs that embrace the changing structure of agriculture to ensure the services we deliver are moving our customers forward in this new century."

DOE Funds Study To Increase Value Of Manure

RICHLAND, Washington — It is hard to think of animal manure as a valuable commodity. But with 160 million tons of it produced annually in the U.S., and most of it rich in carbohydrates and proteins, researchers at the Department of Energy's Pacific Northwest National Laboratory (PNNL) and Washington State University (WSU) see potential in converting substantial portions of it to commodity chemicals and other high-value products.

PNNL and WSU are beginning a two-year study to determine the best processes to generate higher-value products from manure. The study is being funded by an $800,000 grant through DOE's Office of Energy Efficiency and Renewable Energy and is focused on developing new processes to use animal manure as feedstock for commodity chemical production.

The team will use the carbohydrate- and protein-based chemical building blocks from manure to produce a range of products. The carbohydrate material, composed of five- and six-carbon sugars, will be converted to commodity chemicals, such as glycols or diols, commonly used to manufacture antifreeze or certain plastics. The protein components will be converted to animal feed and other higher-value products.

PNNL has developed innovative catalytic approaches for converting other low-value biobased materials to chemicals, such as the wastes and by-products resulting from processing corn, wheat, potatoes and dairy products. Researchers at PNNL separate the carbohydrates and oils from low-value feedstocks. The carbohydrate fraction then is catalytically converted to higher-value products. This approach will be applied to manure, described as a messier resource by Don Stevens, project manager for the PNNL work.

"While some biomass feedstocks, such as wheat wastes, are made up mostly of clean carbohydrates, manure is messier with only about half of it consisting of carbohydrates. Additionally, manure contains a much higher protein percentage and a greater mix of minerals," said Stevens. "The production of chemicals is therefore more complex and the processes must include more extensive separations of these components to be useful for chemical production."

PNNL is teaming with WSU researchers because of their extensive experience in separations chemistry and in recovery of high-value protein products. WSU is a land grant university and operates a dairy and feedlot in Pullman, Wash.

The payoff could be huge — environmentally and economically. "Animal waste is increasingly difficult to dispose of. With fewer, but larger, animal operations across the U.S., the waste is more geographically concentrated, resulting in more environmental problems," Stevens said.

"By successfully converting the wastes into chemicals, we can greatly reduce the need for open-field disposal of manure, which will reduce odor problems, methane emission to the atmosphere and run-off of contaminants into streams and lakes."

Another payoff is reducing the number of petroleum-based products on the market. Currently, almost all the medium-volume commodity chemicals, such as those used to make antifreeze, carpet fibers and soda pop bottles, are petroleum-derived. Stevens said it's conceivable that in a few years biobased products could directly replace some chemicals currently made from petroleum resources.

They also could be cheaper to produce. Stevens said the kinds of chemicals the team is focusing on are potentially more efficient to produce from biomass feedstocks than petroleum, and that the total energy required for their production is roughly half when compared to the same chemical from petroleum.

Business inquiries on this or other PNNL technologies should be directed to 1-888-375-PNNL or e-mail: inquiry@pnl.gov.

New York Farm Bureau Urges Lawmakers To Restrict Dairy Imports

GLENMONT, N.Y. — New York Farm Bureau President John Lincoln is urging New York's congressional delegation to help stem the tide of foreign subsidized and "fuzzily labeled" dairy products.

At issue is a new technology producing a new product — milk protein concentrates (MPCs) that are unregulated by trade treaty. The mislabeling of product-blends by exporters as simply MPCs is an additional concern.

American companies import these foreign-subsidized proteins to make pizza cheese, desserts, weight-loss drinks, and "power bars," displacing American milk in the process.

There has long been a quota on importation of non-fat dry milk powder to keep foreign countries from dumping excess and subsidized milk on the U.S. market. "Over the past six years, foreign exporters have cleverly found a new way to circumvent the existing rules," said Lincoln, a dairy farmer from Bloomfield, N.Y. "They found they could get around the rules by blending the powder with MPCs and casein (another milk protein) and still call it milk protein concentrate."

There is no import quota on either casein or milk protein concentrates.

New York congressional representatives John McHugh and Maurice Hinchey have introduced legislation in the House of Representatives to address this unfair trading practice for New York's dairy farm families. It would create two new tariff-rate quotas — one for milk protein concentrates and one for casein. The legislation also has a companion bill in the U.S. Senate.

Blending the restricted non-fat dry milk powder with these unrestricted protein imports lets manufacturers use less domestically-produced powder, which hurts the long term outlook for U.S. dairy farm prices, said Lincoln.

Legislation introduced by representatives McHugh and Hinchey — House of Representatives bill 1786 and Senate bill 847 — is particularly important in light of the Department of Agriculture's recent decision to realign the already low support price for non-fat dry milk powder, said Lincoln. "Since the support price for non-fat dry milk powder has been cut by 10 cents, it is crucial to dairy-farmer prices that we eliminate unfair competition from foreign countries."

Lincoln urges dairy farmers to contact their congressional representatives to express their support of this important legislation.

Operating Committee Approves Recommended FY2002 Checkoff Budget

DENVER, Colo. — The Beef Promotion Operating Committee has developed a recommended Beef Board budget for fiscal year 2002 of $45 million.

If approved, the FY2002 budget recommendation would authorize, beginning Oct. 1, 2001, $23.75 million for promotion, $4.975 million in research, $5.5 million in consumer information, $1.975 million in industry information, $4.555 million in foreign marketing, $1.5 million in producer communications, $150,000 for evaluation, $120,000 for program development, and $2.475 million for administration and USDA oversight.

The full Cattlemen's Beef Board will consider the FY2002 budget recommendation during its summer meeting August 5-9 in Denver. The budget recommendation, if accepted by the full Beef Board, must also be approved by USDA.

USDA Price Reporting Fix Good News For The Cattle Industry

WASHINGTON, D.C. — A United States Department of Agriculture report, released Monday, proposes changes that will increase the amount of price reporting information disseminated and is expected to improve the reporting program overall, the National Cattlemen's Beef Association (NCBA) said.

Chuck Lambert, NCBA Chief Economist, said "NCBA is pleased that USDA responded to industry concerns about the limited amount of information being released and adopted cattle producers' recommendations for change.

The USDA mandatory price reporting system went into effect on April 2, 2001 with a restrictive guideline which prevented USDA from releasing pricing data if less than three packing companies report it, or if any one company represented more than 60 percent of any line of report to USDA.

"NCBA applauds Secretary Veneman for her quick response and equitable solution," said NCBA President Lynn Cornwell, a cattle rancher from Glasgow, Montana. "This new proposed system will allow greater access to pricing information."

The USDA report, from an internal price reporting review team appointed by Secretary Veneman in mid-May, covers a number of aspects of the price reporting system.

Additional industry recommendations are being reviewed and considered. Price reporting information is a valuable tool in price discovery and is used, by cattle producers, for making important business decisions.

Vegetative Mulch Reduces Pesticide, Soil Losses In Runoff

WASHINGTON, D.C. — As a mulch in vegetable production, the cover crop hairy vetch greatly reduces pesticide runoff and soil erosion, making it an excellent alternative to plastic mulch often used by vegetable growers.

This finding was presented recently by Agricultural Research Service scientist Pamela Rice during a USDA meeting of the American Chemical Society in San Diego, Calif. Rice is with the ARS Soil and Water Management Research Unit, based at the University of Minnesota at St. Paul.

Vegetable growers now often use plastic (polyethylene) mulch to maintain soil moisture and control weeds. When it rains, however, the plastic increases surface runoff because 50-75 percent of the field is covered with plastic that will not allow rain to penetrate into the soil. The runoff contains eroded soil and agricultural chemicals that may have potential harmful effects on organisms in nearby streams and rivers.

In a three-year collaborative study, Rice and co-workers at the Environmental Quality Lab and the Sustainable Agricultural Systems Lab at the Henry A. Wallace Beltsville Agricultural Research Center, Beltsville, Md., have developed a more sustainable vegetable production system that uses hairy vetch, a vegetative mulch. ARS has demonstrated that hairy vetch is economical and can effectively control weeds.

The study compared runoff and soil erosion from field plots using vegetative and plastic mulch. Fields with plastic mulch lost two to four times more water and up to 10 times more sediment than the plots using hairy vetch mulch.

NPPC Board Approves Plans For 2002 World Pork Expo

DES MOINES, Iowa — Plans for the 2002 World Pork Expo were approved at the National Pork Producers Council Board of Directors meeting June 7.

The 2002 World Pork Expo is scheduled for June 6-8 in Des Moines, Iowa. The NPPC board of directors named a task force to evaluate ways to enhance the 15-year-old event.

NPPC President Barb Determan, a pork producer from Early, Iowa, will lead the team to evaluate all aspects of hosting World Pork Expo, including biosecurity - particularly ways to safeguard against the spread of Foreign Animal Diseases, educational opportunities to offer and identifying ways to deliver information to pork producers.

"Expo is a great opportunity for pork producers to gather and access the latest information they need on their farms," Determan said.

At an NPPC Board of Directors meeting in April, the decision was made to cancel the 2001 World Pork Expo in an effort to be proactive in preventing the introduction of Foot-and-Mouth Disease to the United States. The disease, which has devastated agriculture in Europe this year, has not been in the United States since 1929.

"We did not want to take any risk of a possible outbreak potentially spread through the hosting of World Pork Expo, an event attended by pork producers and pork industry leaders from around the world," Determan said.

"We have seen tremendous devastation in countries around the world from Foot-and-Mouth Disease outbreaks. In Great Britain, 3.2 million animals have been destroyed. Farmers' futures are in doubt and the tourism industry has been crushed financially due to travel restrictions."

Part of the information that could have been shared at expo is being mailed directly to pork producers. The World Pork Expo 2001 Official Souvenir Program and Directory will be mailed to pork producers.

The 104-page magazine includes information about check-off-funded programs that would have been highlighted at expo and how to find more information about educational opportunities.

Pennsylvania Winter Wheat Production Down 26 Percent

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Winter wheat production in Pennsylvania is forecast at 7.68 million bushels, down 26 percent from last year's production of 10.34 million bushels. Farmers expect to harvest 160,000 acres with an average yield of 48 bushels per acre.

U.S. winter wheat production is forecast at 1.32 billion bushels, down two percent from May 1, and 15 percent below 2,000 to the lowest level since 1978. Based on conditions as of June 1, the U.S. yield is forecast at 41.2 bushels per acre. This is down 0.6 bushel from the last forecast. Producers expect to harvest 32.09 million acres, down from 35.02 million acres a year ago.

Ridge Administration Preserves Record 40 Farms

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — On behalf of Gov. Tom Ridge, Agriculture Secretary Sam Hayes announced the preservation of 40 farms with 4,192 acres in 21 counties.

This is the highest number of farms preserved at one meeting under the Ridge Administration, furthering Pennsylvania's role as a leader in preservation. A record number of easements were approved with township funding, and the first farm under the Long-Term Installment Purchase Program was approved.

"This unprecedented preservation activity is made possible by the continued support of Gov. Ridge's Growing Greener investment. Through this investment and the commitment of the state lawmakers and county governments, Pennsylvania has taken the lead nationally in maintaining our agricultural heritage," said Hayes.

The secretary also noted that Pennsylvania is providing two new options to farm owners to preserve their farmland: the Long-Term Installment Program and Land Trust Reimbursement Program.

The Long-Term Installment Program provides tax relief to farms entering into the farmland preservation program with an extension of payments over several years rather than one lump sum. While the farm is under the Long Term Payment plan, they can defer capital gains taxes for the term of the plan. The benefit of this program is that it helps the county farmland preservation board purchase more farmland easements in one year.

In addition, the Land Trust Reimbursement Grant Program assists private land trusts with land preservation by providing grants to help defray the costs of acquiring agricultural conservation easements. Ten land trusts across Pennsylvania participate in this valuable program. Under this program, 855 acres of farmland have been preserved.

"Gov. Ridge has supported farmland preservation and has been an advocate for the preservation of open space. Through support of the Governor and residents of the commonwealth, we continue to preserve farmland in a record-setting pace," Hayes said.

During the June meeting, Hayes noted that through the hard work of county farmland preservation boards a record 313 farms have been preserved since July, 2000. To date 1,640 farms and 198,811 acres have been preserved. This process was completed through purchase of development rights or easements.

For more information on the Farmland Preservation Program, contact the Bureau of Farmland Preservation at (717) 783-3167, or access the Department of Agriculture's homepage through the PA PowerPort at www.state.pa.us or directly at www.pda.state.pa.us.

AMS Selects Plant Variety Protection Office Commissioner

WASHINGTON, D.C. — On Monday, the USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service announced the selection of Paul Zankowski as the new commissioner of the Plant Variety Protection Office.

Zankowski comes to AMS from a position with the Harris Moran Vegetable Seed Company in Modesto, Calif., where he held the title of director of biotechnology. While with Harris Moran, Zankowski developed commercial biotechnology products, administered the molecular biology program, and conducted extensive plant breeding research.

As commissioner, Zankowski will head the USDA staff that administers the provisions of the Plant Variety Protection Act.

The act extends intellectual property right protection to developers of new varieties of seed-reproduced and tuber-propagated plants. This protection encourages development of new varieties of plants, benefitting agriculture, home gardeners, and consumers.

Zankowski received his master's and doctorate degrees in plant physiology from the University of California and a bachelor's degree in biology from Penn State.

Technology May Turn Stover Into Ethanol Source

James Hettenhaus
Fermentation Expert
And Consultant
Department Of Energy

Renewable fuels are becoming an essential part of our country's energy future. Ethanol from corn and diesel fuel from soybeans are finally capturing the public's attention as oil supplies dwindle and gasoline prices rise.

Legislation has been introduced in the U.S. Senate that would significantly increase the use of biofuels. Today, U.S. ethanol production is about 2 billion gallons, or 1.5 percent of our nation's fuel. Almost all of this is made from corn, consuming over 700 million bushels or 7 percent of the corn crop.

If Congress passes the recently introduced Renewable Fuels for Energy Security Act, industry capacity would jump to 9 billion gallons by 2011 and 16 billion gallons by 2016. That level of production would displace oil imports by 300,000 barrels daily by 2011 and 610,000 barrels a day five years later.

Which raises an obvious question: How are we going to produce enough crops for all our current food, feed and industrial needs if we start using corn and soybeans to produce fuel?

There are two answers: One, we will need to increase grain yields, and two; we must find a way to use excess stover (stalks, leaves and cobs) for fuel production. The good news is that progress is being made on both fronts through research in biotechnology.

Already biotechnology is helping to protect yields from pests and diseases. And extensive research is being conducted to identify and utilize the genes that will make today's high-yielding hybrids produce even more grain. There have also been significant advances in biotech research to make corn stover a usable source for ethanol. The Department of Energy Office of Transportation Technologies has awarded a total of $30 million to help fund this effort by two leading enzyme companies, Genencor and Novozyme. A third enzyme company, Iogen, already has a small plant that processes 40 tons per day of stover to help finalize the design for one 50 times larger. It will use 2,000 tons of stover per day, and produce 60 million gallons per year of ethanol.

Ethanol is produced when sugars in corn are put through a fermentation process. Corn stover can produce as much sugar as corn grain, but stover is not readily broken down into sugars that can be converted into ethanol. Much of the stover (38 percent) is cellulose, a tough substance that does not easily break down. Wood for example contains cellulose. Enzymes produced by fungi or bacteria can break down the corn cellulose into the sugar glucose, but the process is very time consuming and therefore expensive. Genencor and Novozyme are using biotechnology to modify the fungi and bacteria so they produce an enzyme with improved activity on cellulose so it more readily yields glucose. Another component of stover (32 percent) is hemicellulose, which readily produces four different sugars. Unfortunately, microbes cannot digest those sugars; thus they cannot be converted into fuel alcohol. Breakthroughs in biotechnology, however, can produce genetically enhanced microbes capable of digesting the sugars.

All this work to cost-effectively produce sugars from stover could mean a really sweet deal for corn producers, because their fields currently produce as much stover as they do corn. With the help of genetically improved enzymes and microbes, it should be possible to get as much sugar from a pound of stover as from a pound of corn grain. It has been estimated that growers can realize an additional $20 net per acre by selling stover to ethanol producers, depending on how much is harvested from the field and other factors, such as transportation distance. Many industry leaders expect that 50 to 100 biorefineries may be in operation by 2010.

Not all of the stover in a field should be converted to ethanol production. Universities and agriculture have been working together over the past few years to define the amount of stover that should be left so as not to have a negative impact on soil organic material and erosion. Even if only half of it is harvested and converted to ethanol production, there would be a meaningful contribution to energy security, rural economy and the grower's bottom line. At the expected delivery price of $35 per dry ton of stover delivered, a refinery would purchase more than $24 million of stover annually.

Stover is a term that may be unfamiliar to some folks. Some call it stubble. Others call it crop residue. Some refer to it by the unflattering term of trash. We can expect that term to go out of popular use when the "trash" starts producing cash.

Editor's Note: The author is a consultant who works with the U.S. Department of Energy and private companies to commercialize the technology.

Farm Bureau Applauds Land Rights Decision

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The American Farm Bureau Federation recently hailed a Supreme Court decision stating that landowners are entitled to seek compensation when they are forbidden by government from realizing their property's full economic potential.

"The court's decision is a considerable victory for landowners and the fight many have been forced to wage against government attempts to block landowner takings claims," said American Farm Bureau Federation President Bob Stallman. "The court weakened troublesome obstacles to landowner takings claims and expressed dissatisfaction with existing rules that hinder 'partial takings' claims."

AFBF and the Rhode Island Farm Bureau filed an amicus brief supporting landowner Anthony Palazzolo who was prevented from developing land by the state's Coastal Resources Management Council. Palazzolo bought 18 acres in 1959, with the long-term plan to build 74 homes. In 1978, Palazzolo changed title of his land from his single shareholder corporation to himself individually.

Despite several attempts to satisfy the council's rulings, the state repeatedly rejected Palazzolo's amended plans for more than four decades. When he ultimately sought compensation for his loss, the state court rejected his claim, citing the change of title, and claiming his property had not lost its entire value.

"Rejecting this landowner's best efforts to comply with the coastal council's changing demands clearly devalued the property," said Stallman. "The council's action effectively limited the use of the bulk of the land solely to a public wildlife refuge, without the public bearing any expense.

"Farm Bureau was also extremely troubled by the state's rules changes due to a 'paper change' in ownership. Such actions occur frequently when farm families transfer land ownership to assure that their land stays in farming and under their family's control. The Supreme Court rejected the state court's ruling that would have deprived heirs and successors of any right to file a compensation claim."

While the court remanded the case back to Rhode Island to determine whether there was a detrimental economic impact on Palazzolo's investment potential, Stallman said the organization will continue to monitor the case and support Palazzolo's right to fair compensation.

"Farm Bureau members hope the Rhode Island courts award a fair compensation to Mr. Palazollo, taking into account the four decades of expenses and frustrations he has endured in attempting to follow the council's procedures," Stallman said.

"When government restricts the use of private property to create a public benefit, then the landowner should be compensated."

The court also ruled in Palazzolo's favor merely by considering the case because the state claimed he should have pursued other procedural options before litigation was necessary. According to Stallman, the council's constant delaying tactics resulted prevented the property owner from achieving his land's full economic potential.

Blight-Resistant Potato Variety To Stop Potato Crisis?

WARSAW, Poland — Russia is teetering on the brink of a large-scale potato crisis ignited by the same virulent, fungal-like pathogen, Phytophthora infestans, more commonly called late blight, that was responsible for the 19th century Irish potato famine.

But there is hope in the form of a blight-resistant potato variety, New York 121, which Cornell University scientists have provided to Russia for testing in the hopes of preventing food shortages. Cornell's CEEM program is the only non-Russian group actively trying to resolve the Russian potato problems.

Annually, Russia loses 4 million tons of potato, more than 10 percent of total production, because of late blight. Virulent strains of the pathogen are now spreading to important potato-producing areas in Russia and to central and eastern Europe.

The late blight threat is still very important and even critical in some regions, said Alexei V. Filippov, of the All Russian Institute of Phytopathology, addressing a group of 58 international agricultural researchers from 12 countries at the Collaborative Research on Potato Late Blight workshop in Poland.

The scientists meeting in Warsaw said that New York 121 is not a silver bullet to solve all of Russia's agricultural woes, but is a small, early step toward sustainability and modernization of a system that has long been at the mercy of pestilence.

USDA Announces $5.7 Million In Business Development Grants

WASHINGTON, D.C. — On Tuesday, the USDA announced 48 applications, totaling $5.7 million, have been selected as finalists for rural business grant funding consideration.

The funds will be used to facilitate the development of small and emerging private business enterprises and provide technical assistance, training, and planning activities for economic development in 24 states.

The applicants selected represent 47 public bodies, private nonprofit corporations and federally recognized Indian tribes who will use the funds to assist some of America's more distressed rural areas. Distressed areas identified include federally designated rural Enterprise Communities and Empowerment Zones (EC/EZ), Rural Economic Area Partnership (REAP) zones, and Native American Tribes and tribal organizations.

Grant funding has been made available through the Rural Business Enterprise Grant (RBEG) and Rural Business Opportunities Grant (RBOG) programs, which are administered by the Rural Business-Cooperative Service, an agency within USDA Rural Development.

The 24 states and their funding levels include Alaska, $70,000; Arkansas, $390,810; California, $621,974; Georgia, $85,190; Florida, $327,863; Idaho, $85,000; Illinois, $252,100; Kentucky, $375,000; Maine, $148,180; Mississippi, $336,500; Missouri, $253,655; Montana, $113,000; New Mexico, $97,300; North Carolina, $300,000; North Dakota, $50,000; Oklahoma, $146,900; Oregon, $80,000; South Carolina, $578,500; South Dakota, $113,600; Tennessee, $36,000; West Virginia, $90,000; Washington, $430,988; Wisconsin, $694,910; and Vermont, $25,909.

USDA serves as the lead federal entity for rural development needs and administers program assistance through three agencies: Rural Housing Service, Rural Business-Cooperative Service, and Rural Utilities Service.

More information on USDA Rural Development can be obtained by visiting USDA's Website at http://www.rurdev.usda.gov/. A list of individual loan recipients being considered for funding can be found at http://www.rurdev.usda.gov/rd/newsroom/news.htm.

Carnegie Mellon University Makes Largest Wind Energy Purchase In U.S.

PITTSBURGH — Carnegie Mellon University will make the nation's largest single retail purchase of wind energy through an agreement announced Sunday by Carnegie Mellon, Community Energy, Inc., and Environmental Defense.

Carnegie Mellon will buy five percent of its total electricity next year from new wind power generated in western Pennsylvania. The purchase of wind-generated electricity, equivalent to the energy required by nearly 650 homes per year, is part of Carnegie Mellon's commitment to cleaner energy and the environment.

"Developing new technologies, policies, and practices to protect and enhance our global environment is one of our strategic priorities," said Carnegie Mellon President Jared L. Cohon. "Our university is committed to using our research and education programs — as well as our own campus practices — to improve environmental quality, to provide leadership in environmentally sustainable practices, and to support the development of wind power generation in western Pennsylvania. We hope this effort will become a practical model for other universities and organizations."

Carnegie Mellon's wind energy will be generated by 1.5 megawatt wind turbines to be installed this fall at the Exelon-Community Energy Wind Farm at Mill Run, under construction in Springfield and Stewart townships in Fayette County about 40 miles southeast of Pittsburgh. The Mill Run project, consisting of 10 1.5-megawatt turbines, the largest wind farm announced in the eastern U.S. to date. The Carnegie Mellon wind energy purchase of 4,778 megawatt-hours will require more than an entire dedicated turbine to meet the demand.

"Carnegie Mellon's commitment to clean energy will protect human health by reducing pollution and help protect the planet from the threat of global warming," said Environmental Defense Executive Director Fred Krupp. "The university's purchase of wind power sends the clear signal that clean, renewable energy is a viable resource that will help reduce dependence on fossil fuels. Carnegie Mellon should be commended for its leadership in this arena."

By moving from local coal-fired power plant production to wind power, the purchase is expected to eliminate the equivalent of 13 tons of nitrogen oxides per year; 35 tons of sulfur dioxide, which leads to acid rain; 5,100 tons of carbon dioxide, the primary contributor to global warming; and 0.18 pounds of mercury, a pollutant that is toxic to humans and the environment. The reduction in carbon dioxide emissions is equivalent to planting nearly 19,000 acres of trees or taking more than 1,000 cars off the road.

Wind energy is the world's fastest growing form of electricity generation.

Vets Plus Product

Now Contains Prebiotic FOS

KNAPP, Wis. — Probiotic Power™ now contains a prebiotic, FOS. Probiotic Power™ contains 60 CFU of Lactic Acid Bacteria in every pound of powdered mix, to help stimulate appetite when stress occurs, as a follow-up to antibiotic therapy to re-inoculate the gut with the good bacteria that were killed by antibiotics and to promote efficient feed conversion.

Probiotic Power™ is an excellent product for animals not eating at all or not eating aggressively, because it provides Lactic Acid Bacteria and FOS, along with Vitamins A, D, C, E and B-vitamins.

The B-complex vitamins stimulate the animal's appetite to get them back on feed or eating more aggressively, helping to avoid DA's when this occurs in fresh cows. FOS works synergistically with the Lactic Acid Bacteria to help animals deal with stress and illness and optimize the digestive tract environment.

Vets Plus has announced that all their probiotic and electrolyte products are all natural and require no withhold or withdrawal.

Young Guns Focus On Enhancing Future Of Hereford Breed

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — More than 130 Hereford breeders, ages 22-45, recently met to design a road map for the future success of the Hereford breed.

The Young Guns Genetic Focus Workshop, hosted by the American Hereford Association (AHA) was conducted June 10-11 in Kansas City, Mo. Top industry leaders, led by Dr. Harlan Ritchie, Michigan State University, had some hard-hitting facts and advice to share with breeders in taking an aggressive approach to becoming full service genetic providers.

According to Ritchie, seedstock producers will need to focus on maximizing the strengths of the Hereford breed and minimizing the weaknesses, while at the same time decreasing the risk and enhancing the profitability for their customers.

The speakers took an honest look at the changes that need to be made in order for the Hereford breed to be successful. Dr. Dan Moser, Kansas State University, used across breed averages and showed Hereford genetic trends in comparison to Angus and Simmental. He gave the breeders some important points to think about such as, the demand for Hereford heifer bulls, ideal growth rate and mature size of Herefords, appropriate level of milk production and genetic trends for fertility, longevity and efficiency.

The consensus, at the conclusion of the workshop included expanding the focus on performance and the economically relevant traits and improving communication between the association, breeders and the beef industry.

Harvesting the heterosis was the message that rang clear throughout the entire event as young breeders were told numerous times that heterosis and breed complimentarity are powerful tools for the future of the beef industry. "Our mission was to challenge, but not offend our young Hereford breeders at our first Young Guns event," stated Craig Huffhines, AHA's executive vice president.

"There is a predominantly black U.S. cow herd that needs heterosis to enhance its profit potential. Our Hereford Young Guns are challenged to produce the maternal component that will make black cows more efficient through the use of Hereford genetics."

Young Gun participant, Dale Spencer, Brewster, Neb., said, "Let's make sure the Young Guns' mission does not die. It is vital that those of us that attended, take the message home and back to our state meetings."

John Lacey, past NCBA president from Paso Robles, Calif., Kay Richardson, Evinston, Fla., Ray Marxer, Matador Cattle Co., Dillon, Mont., and Douglas Olsen, Harrisburg, Neb., expressed their opinions in regards to using the Hereford breed in their operations.

Pa. Vegetable Industry Gives More Than $60,000 For Research

RICHFIELD (Juniata Co.) — Nineteen vegetable projects will be funded jointly by the Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers Association (PVGA) and the Pennsylvania Vegetable Marketing and Research Program.

The Marketing and Research Program will be contributing more than $30,000 to the vegetable research projects. PVGA will contribute $25,000 toward vegetable research and $5,000 toward small fruit research.

In the past 13 years, PVGA has contributed $215,000 to vegetable and small fruit research. This has been made possible solely through the profits earned at the association's food booths at the Farm Show and Ag Progress Days.

The Vegetable Marketing and Research Program is a statewide checkoff program dedicated to funding practical vegetable research and promoting Pennsylvania vegetables. All growers in the state are required to pay an annual assessment of $25 plus $1.50 for each acre over 10 acres. The vegetable projects chosen for funding and their objectives are as follows:

• Varietal resistance to blights and fruit rots in processing tomatoes, Alan MacNab, Penn State, $2,500, to evaluate processing tomato varieties for ripening time and tolerance to diseases.

• Breeding line resistance to bacterial canker in processing tomato, Alan MacNab, Penn State, $2,500, to evaluate processing tomato breeding lines for ripening time and severity of bacterial canker.

• Vegetable disease forecasting, Alan MacNab, Penn State, $3,000, to operate a disease forecast network for Pennsylvania vegetable producers and provide to growers timely information on favorability of the environment for disease development and times when fungicide coverage is most important. Also, to explore a low-cost method to evaluate new sources of environmental data.

• Development of early blight and late blight resistant tomatoes, Majid Foolad, Penn State, $6,000, to develop tomato cultivars resistant to early blight and late blight and other tomato diseases in Pennsylvania and which are adapted to Pennsylvania conditions.

• Development of tomato cultivars with improved lycopene and other fruit quality characteristics, Majid Foolad, Penn State, $6,000, to develop processing and fresh-market tomato cultivars with enhanced fruit lycopene, sugar, and vitamin contents and to develop high-yielding tomato cultivars adapted to Pennsylvania conditions.

• Optimizing plant population and row spacing in processing tomatoes, Lowell Luft and Wesley Martin, Brubaker Consulting Group, $3,750, to determine the effects that row spacing and plant population has on the yield and quality of processing tomatoes. The standard row spacing of five-feet will be compared to narrower spacing at the same populations to determine if yields increase without sacrificing quality.

• Processing tomato variety trial, Lowell Luft and Wesley Martin, Brubaker Consulting Group, $5,000, to identify varieties that will consistently provide high quality and yields under eastern growing conditions.

• Snap bean insect management: alternatives to organophosphates and carbamates, and developing potato leafhopper thresholds, Lee Stivers and Tom Kuhar, Cornell University, and Shelby Fleischer and Tom Butzler, Penn State, $3,888, to evaluate nonorganophosphate and carbamate insecticides for efficacy in controlling potato leafhopper, European corn borer, and other insect pests of snap beans. Also, to assess the relative impact of these insecticides on natural enemy populations and to provide supporting data for the refinement of potato leafhopper thresholds based on plant growth stage and moisture stress.

• Replacing starter phosphorus for early processing snap beans, Thomas Bjorkman, Steve Reiners, and Alan Taylor, Cornell University, $2,411, to determine to what extent Pennsylvania vegetable soils are susceptible to potassium bicarbonate for releasing soil phosphorus. Also, to determine whether snap bean growth in cold Pennsylvania soils is enhanced by phosphate release and to provide Pennsylvania snap bean growers with a tool for managing phosphorus use, and specific guidance on its suitability for various regions within Pennsylvania.

• Breeding for white mold resistance in snap beans, Phillip D. Griffiths, Cornell University, $2,900, to advance crosses made between lines showing the highest levels of white mold resistance and commercial types to the F4 generation, and field test all lines generated for white mold resistance during summer 2001. Also, to screen white mold resistant field selections in the greenhouse, and advance the generations with further screens to determine resistant types with good horticultural characteristics.

• Comparison of 1 — 1 — 1 fertilizer versus 1 — 3 — 1 fertilizer banded at planting time for processing snap beans, Jeff Mizer and Michael Orzolek, Penn State, $609, to determine whether application of excessive amounts of phosphorus causes luxury consumption by the beans, resulting in weak-rooted plants that cannot reach their full yield potential. Also, to reduce both nitrogen and phosphorus applications rates so as to reduce the amounts of nitrates and phosphates that enter the Susquehanna River and eventually the Chesapeake Bay.

• Weed control in sweet corn: alternatives to Atrazine, including Buctril, Michael Orzolek, Penn State, $4,000, to evaluate both experimental and nonlabeled herbicides which may be acceptable alternatives to atrzine application in sweet corn. Also, to develop date which may help support a Section 18 labels for new experimental herbicides in sweet corn for Pennsylvania growers.

• Monitoring thermal performance in "grow tunnel" improvements in nonfossil fuel heated greenhouses used for winter greens and herb production, Stephen and Joshua Moore, Sonnewald Natural Foods, Harmony Essentials, $995, to evaluate using existing computer monitoring equipment, the thermal performance of the "new grow tunnel" by comparing it with the "old grow tunnel" system.

• Pumpkin disease control and yield improvement using silicon nutrition, Joseph Heckman and others, Rutgers University, $3,000, to determine the effectiveness of soil-applied silicon for control of diseases on pumpkin. Also, to determine pumpkin yield response to silicon fertilization and to conduct leaf tissue analysis and soil tests to monitor the effects of silicon treatment.

• Tomato, pepper, and muskmelon production in commercial sized high tunnels, William Lamont and Michael Orzolek, Penn State, $6,000, to construct two commercial-size high tunnels (17-foot by 96-foot) at the Penn State High Tunnel Research and Education Research Facility located at the Horticulture Farm at Rockspring to determine both the production and economics of growing tomatoes, peppers, and muskmelons for the early market in commercial-size high tunnels and how the information collected correlates to smaller research size tunnels. The ability to conduct crop production research in commercial-size high tunnels will ensure that the information

'Smart' Fertilizer Improves Plant Growth, Prevents Runoff Pollution

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — A new "smart" phosphorus fertilizer, developed by Penn State horticultural scientists reportedly, improves plant root growth, drought tolerance, shoot quality and flowers while also preventing up to 90 percent of the nutrient runoff that can foul waterways.

The new fertilizer is currently undergoing its first Pennsylvania field trials with the aid of a grant from the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture. However, field trials in Florida have been ongoing since 1998 and have shown high performance of ornamentals grown in sandy soils prone to leaching.

The fertilizer has also been shown to improve plant growth and drought tolerance while virtually eliminating leaching in nursery or greenhouse plants grown in peat or soilless media. In the soilless systems tested by the Penn State researchers with a wide variety of ornamental plants and vegetables, leaching was reduced to less than one percent of conventionally fertilized plants.

The new field fertilizer, which is being patented by the university, was developed by Dr. Jonathan Lynch, associate professor of plant nutrition, Dr. Kathleen Brown, professor of post harvest physiology, and Robert H. Snyder, research support associate, in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences. The inventors say that, besides uses in agriculture and floriculture, the new fertilizer may be useful for stadium fields and golf courses as well.

Lynch explained that, in traditional fertilizer systems, the amount of nutrient available to the plant is large immediately after application and declines as the plant takes it up and the nutrient runs off when it rains. However, in the new "smart" system, the supply of phosphorus available to the plant always matches a level typically found in "natural" soils.

In the new "smart" system, phosphorus is automatically released and maintained at low, natural levels to meet the plants' needs by the chemical buffering action of aluminum oxide. The phosphorus is bound on the surface of aluminum oxide granules, which allows only a limited amount of the nutrient to be released. More of the bound phosphorus is released only as the initial amount is used up. The low levels of phosphorus released by the "smart" fertilizer mean that there is less to enter ground and surface waters.

Lynch notes that environmental regulations on runoff can be expected to become tighter in the near future. Sudden growths or blooms of microorganisms caused by nutrient runoff can cause life threatening human illness as well as make rivers, streams, lakes, and beaches unattractive and unhealthy for wildlife. He adds that Europe already has tighter regulations than the U.S.

While the low, natural levels of phosphorus released by the new

Senate Approves 4-H Partnership Bill

WASHINGTON, D.C. — When 4-H celebrates its centennial next year, senators Dick Lugar (R-IN) and Tom Harkin (D-IA) want the National 4-H Council's proposed public-private partnership to set new strategies for youth development for the next century. Their bill supports the centennial and the 4-H motto, "To make the best better."

"In celebrating its centennial, the National 4-H Council has proposed a public-private partnership to develop new strategies for youth development for the next century. The funding authorized in this bill will allow the National 4-H Council to convene meetings and hold discussions at the national, state, and local levels to form strategies for youth development. A final report will summarize the discussions, make specific youth development recommendations, and propose an action plan," said Lugar.

"We need to build on the tradition and success of 4-H to develop new approaches for youth development that are appropriate and effective in the 21st Century. Youth today face ever-growing pressures, demands and challenges far different from those of the past. 4-H has a great deal to offer them, but to be fully successful, 4-H must adapt to the realities of an increasingly complex and rapidly changing world. This legislation is designed to bring 4-H into its second century by developing new strategies for youth development," said Agriculture, Nutrition and Forestry Committee Chairman Harkin.

The 4-H program operates in more than 3,000 U.S. counties, encompassing all 50 states and the District of Columbia. Last year, more than 6.8 million youths ages 5-19 participated, as well as over 600,000 volunteer youth and adult leaders.

In the past two decades, 4-H has seen substantial growth in urban areas, now the home of one of every four 4-H members (1.8 million youths). The 4-H mission is to create supportive environments for culturally diverse youth and adults to reach their fullest potential. The program combines the cooperative efforts of youth; volunteer leaders; state land-grant universities; federal, state and local governments; and the U.S. Department of Agriculture Cooperative State Research, Education and Extension Service. Educational programs include plant, animal, and earth sciences; civics and leadership; personal development, family and health; and communications and expressive arts.

The distinctive green four-leaf clover emblem represents the 4-H pledge:

- My Head to clearer thinking,
- My Heart to greater loyalty,
- My Hands to larger service,
- My Health to better living.

For my Club, my community, my country, and my world.

The Lugar-Harkin bill would authorize up to $5 million plus private funds for the 2002 centennial events.

Additional information on 4-H can be found at www.4-H.org and www.fourhcouncil.edu.

The two small fruit research projects approved for funding and their objectives are as follows:

- Strawberry plasticulture in Pennsylvania: influence of planting date and cultivar, Kathleen Demchak, Michael Orzolek and William Lamont, Penn State, $2,300, to obtain information on yields expected from the use of plasticulture system in Pennsylvania and to determine desirable planting dates and cultivars suited to plasticulture and how the interact to produce optimum yields.
- Herbicides for the establishment year of strawberries: A statewide trial (continuation), Kathleen Demchak, Penn State, $2,750, to test the most promising herbicide treatments from a 1999 trial at Rockspring on a variety of soil types under a variety of environmental conditions in order to determine their value to Pennsylvania strawberry growers. Data from the study will be useful in determining whether a Special Local Needs label should be pursued for any new herbicides.

Farmers Union Testifies For A Comprehensive New Farm Bill

WASHINGTON, D.C. — National Farmers Union (NFU) President Leland Swenson recently outlined the family farmer and rancher organization's recommendations for a comprehensive new farm bill before the Senate Agriculture Committee. According to Swenson, the plan provides the opportunity for more farm income from the market and less from the government, stems the price crisis, and fixes the inequities that have been created by Freedom to Farm.

According to Swenson, NFU's legislative initiative provides a strong farm safety net based on a counter-cyclical, non-recourse marketing loan that takes into account producer costs and productivity to address the depressed commodity prices faced by America's family farmers and ranchers.

NFU's farm proposal also provides:

- The establishment of limited, non-commercial commodity reserves to ensure the U.S. long-term commitment to renewable fuels and humanitarian assistance.
- The creation of a limited production loss reserve program that would provide a supplement to risk management.
- A price support program for dairy that is funded at a level that will enable efficient, family-sized dairy producers to receive a reasonable return for their efforts.
- Assurance of the competitiveness of U.S. commodities in domestic and foreign markets.
- Planting flexibility.
- An energy policy that emphasizes a commitment to renewable sources of energy made from commodities produced on America's farms.
- Protections against agriculture and food industry consolidation.
- Expanded conservation programs.
- A renewed commitment to rural housing, economic development and infrastructure.
- Country-of-origin labeling for meat and produce.

"We are pleased that the Senate has chosen to expedite the task of developing a new farm law," Swenson said. "We look forward to continued work with the committee and the rest of Congress to improve the economy for independent producers and rural America."

NFU Opposes Trade Promotion Authority Act

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Robert Carlson, president of the North Dakota Farmers Union, on behalf of the National Farmers Union, stated opposition to the "Trade Promotion Authority Act of 2001" recently introduced by Congressman Philip Crane.

According to Carlson, Crane's "fast track" trade negotiation legislation will allow U.S. trade negotiations to conclude bilateral and multi-lateral trade agreements that continue to disadvantage U.S. farmers and ranchers in the global marketplace.

Carlson stated that the legislation fails to ensure that issues critical to creating fair trade in agricultural products are addressed in negotiations and does not provide an adequate opportunity for input and oversight by the Congress or those directly affected by the outcome of trade negotiations.

The National Farmers Union has elaborated seven principles that must be priorities for the U.S. in all international trade agreements and negotiating authorities. According to Carlson, the Crane bill ignores four of those principles encompassing: 1) The anti-competitive and trade distorting impact of exchange rates, 2) Creation of an equitable balance and improved environmental standards and enforcement procedures, 3) Establishment of enforceable labor standards, and, 4) Coordination of international efforts to reduce the anti-competitive practices and results of increased integration within agriculture.

Carlson also stated that the legislation identifies but does not adequately ensure that: 1) Domestic trade remedies, such as the anti-dumping provisions of U.S. trade law will not be subject to negotiation, 2) Economic assistance programs to mitigate the adverse impact of unfair trade practices by others will be provided, and, 3) the U.S. will maintain its ability and flexibility as a sovereign nation to implement domestic economic safety net policies for producers.

The National Farmers Union seeks to ensure that fair trade interests of American family farmers, ranchers, and rural communities are addressed in all U.S. trade related activities, Carlson added.

'Smart' Fertilizer

"smart" fertilizer can play a role in improving the environment, growers and consumers can also benefit from improved plant quality. In experiments with marigold and impatiens grown in the greenhouse, plants that received the new "smart" fertilizer developed better root systems. High phosphorus levels created by traditional fertilizer systems discourage root growth. Better root systems enable the plant to be more drought tolerant. Plants nourished with the "smart" fertilizer also had a slightly higher number of flowers and the flowers wilted more slowly during drought.

"The buffered fertilizer system can also be recharged after most of the phosphorus on the aluminum oxide is gone," said Lynch. "Using existing systems the grower can add phosphoric acid and the buffer could be good for 20 to 25 years."

The new fertilizer supplies only phosphorus, one of the three primary elements needed for plant growth. The researchers are beginning research programs to develop similar systems for nitrogen and potassium.

Basic Organic Inspector Training Scheduled

Nationally, maple syrup production in 2001 totaled 1.05 million gallons, down 15 percent from last year. The estimated crop value is $28.2 million, down 17 percent from last year. Vermont leads all states with production totaling 275,000 gallons.

Feeder Cattle Prices Impacted By Varied Factors

ITHACA, N.Y. — An evaluation of feeder cattle prices in the fall of 1997 and 1998 at sale barns in Iowa and Missouri was completed to determine the value of source verification (SV) and pooling to feeder cattle buyers (2000 Iowa State University Beef Cattle Research Report).

In order to account for the price difference due to SV and pooling, one must factor in all sources of price variation. Feeder cattle prices are impacted by a combination of lot characteristics (calf weight, number of head, source verification) and market forces (price of corn and fed cattle).

While there are some variation between years and between steers and heifers, equations developed explained most of the variation in feeder price. The value of an additional animal in a lot increased at a decreasing rate. In other words increasing lot size from 10 to 50 head increased price to a greater extent than increasing the lot size from 100 to 150 head. This increase was about a penny per hundred for every one head increase in the number added to the lot. Source verification increased price $1-$2 per hundred over non-source verified cattle, depending on year and sex. For example, a pooled group of 90 head of 550 pound steers received $6.30 per CWT ($34.65 per head) more than 10 head of similar steers in a non-source verified sale during the same year in the same auction market, all else being equal.

Similar results were obtained at the Fall 2000 New York Pooled Weaning and Marketing Program Sale. Steers and heifers weighing 663 pounds and 599 pounds, respectively sold at a premium to most other sales bringing $.86 per pound (steers) and $.80 per pound (heifers). The 42 head of steers and heifers were pooled from four farms and backgrounded for 45 days before being sold.

Lamb Information Center, Summer Barbecue Promotion Launched

DENVER, Colo. — Consumers, media and culinary professionals who need information about American lamb, whether about purchasing tips, preparation methods or recipes, now have a designated one-stop center to obtain answers.

The new American Lamb Information Center was recently launched by the American Sheep Industry Association's American Lamb Council. The information center is a media resource designed to provide information about fresh American lamb.

Information provided by the center includes recipes, photography, purchasing tips, cut information and preparation advice. The American Lamb Information Center phone number is (877) 747-4566.

"The American Lamb Information Center will be a great resource for anyone — consumers, media chefs, etc. — who are looking for more information on American lamb and ways to incorporate it into meals," said American Lamb Promotion Director Paul Rodgers.

The American Lamb Council also has launched a new promotion program called "Simple Summer Entertaining - With the Great Flavor of Fresh American Lamb." The promotion focuses on American lamb's mild flavor and texture, which make it an ideal grilling meat and a welcome change from ordinary barbecue fare.

The promotion features several recipes, including Grilled Mediterranean Lamb Chops with Olive and Tomato Butter. The recipes also include "wine notes" from the Wine Market Council with wine recommendations for each recipe.

News about the information center and the promotion was recently distributed to 500 top food writers in the United States. The information center and summer promotion are part of lamb promotion activities being conducted by the American Lamb Council through a one-year marketing grant from the U.S. Department of Agriculture. T

The grant is part of an industry assistance package awarded following the successful 201 trade action against lamb imports.

Mervin and Shirley Weaver with daughters Sherri, 8; Anne, 12; and Gwen, 14, work together to grow about 20 acres of produce to sell at their roadside stand along Route 501 north of Lititz.

Weaver Farm

Where Family And Vegetables Flourish

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family
Features Editor

LITITZ (Lancaster Co.) — Location counts for a lot when selling produce at a roadside stand, but Mervin and Shirley Weaver know that to keep customers happy and returning, much more than a busy highway is required.

"Freshness," that's what customers want," Weaver said.

To offer fresh, tasty produce isn't a 8-5 job. These days the Weaver family is working from sunup to sundown picking sweet corn, beans, and a spectrum of summer produce.

"This is more labor intensive than dairying, but we enjoy it," Weaver said of the family operation. Daughters Gwen, 14; Anne, 12; and Sherri, 8, help with waiting on customers. Son Chris, 22, is employed off the farm.

Weaver's Produce is located along Route 501, about one mile north of Lititz. The 60-acre farm has been in the Weaver family since 1953, and had been operated as a dairy until the last decade. The drawback with continuing the dairy operation became apparent as traffic flow increased. The farmland is split by the highway, making it increasingly dangerous to stop traffic to allow the herd to cross from pasture to barn for milking time.

The Weavers examined their options. They realized they had a potentially great location for a produce stand. They had fertile soil, and unlike many farms, they also had a water source for irrigating. The Hammer Creek winds through their property enabling them to draw from its source during dry weather.

In 1990, Weaver sold his cows and built a permanent roadside structure. "Even though this is more labor intensive, I haven't missed the cows," he said of the switch.

The best laid plans can easily be beset by weather and customer demand.

The unseasonably cool spring that lasted extra long and then the drastic change to hot and dry weather caused some scrambling to bring forth a harvest.

Weaver is really grateful he is able to irrigate. He said, "Rain is better than irrigation, but when it is hot and dry, irrigation can save a crop."

On the other hand, weather a little on the dry side usually results in a better product. Too much rain or irrigation can cause rot and less flavor.

Although the Weavers grow a significant amount of the produce they offer, they need to fill in the gaps by purchasing some produce from other growers.

The Weavers began selling sweet corn this week. Weaver said that he has learned to pick corn two to three times daily. "If customers stop for corn in the evening, they don't want to hear it was picked in the morning," he said.

"They are super delighted to hear it was picked within the hour," Weaver said of keeping produce as fresh as possible.

Another requirement is offering a wide choice of varieties to meet demand. Yellow varieties have become increasingly popular in comparison with white varieties that previously dominated demand. "But it's more challenging to grow yellow varieties for the early market because they do not germinate as well in cold soil," Weaver said.

This year Weaver tested planting corn covered with black plastic. The cold, rainy spring did not offer much opportunity to get a crop in the ground. After Weaver sowed the seed, he covered the cold, muddy ground, suspicious that the crop might not produce anything. He was pleasantly surprised. Two weeks ago the corn that had been planted beneath plastic towered more than six feet in height, while the seed that remained uncovered had only grown a few feet.

In recent years, Shirley has added more flower seedlings and cut flowers to the market. She finds lots of pleasure in growing flowers.

The roadside stand is open from mid-May through Thanksgiving, from 8:30 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. or 8 p.m. during the corn season.

From the beginning, the Weavers never had a scarcity of customers and have made it a priority to always have someone at the stand. In addition to customer service this has discouraged trouble with theft.

The three girls enjoy waiting on customers, but having some one watching the stand requires eating in shifts. The parents also allow the girls to have a few hours break daily to swim and relax. During that time, the parents gladly take over stand responsibilities.

"We know many of our customers by name, and have met people from all over the world," Shirley said.

The whole family works together at weeding. They rely a little on herbicide spraying. Their response to customers who are concerned about spraying is "We eat it, too."

The Weavers also raise 130 layer hens for the brown egg market and goats for meat, which is sold primarily to the ethnic market.

Two neighbors prepared baked goods and some canned goods for the market stand.

"We are ready for a break by November," Shirley said.

Even then, there is plenty to do to get ready for the growing months. Weaver also has a sawmill lumber cutting business to work on during winter months.

Winter months also allows time for them to attend several vegetable grower meetings.

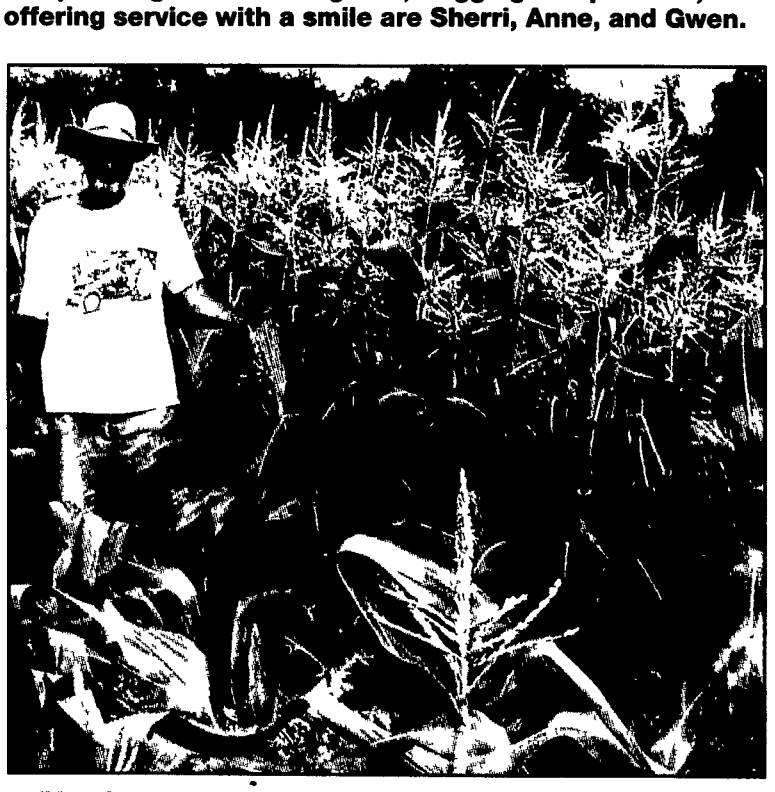
Shirley homeschools the girls until they reach the fourth grade.

"It's a crunch in September

(Turn to Page B3)

Shirley works hard to keep the display stocked orderly with the freshest produce.

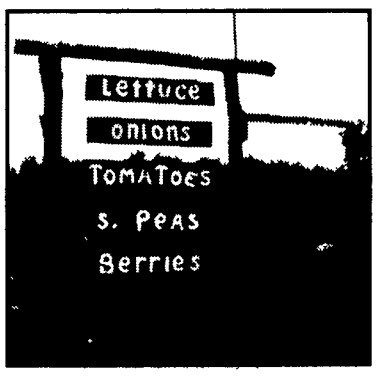
Operating the cash register, bagging the produce, and offering service with a smile are Sherri, Anne, and Gwen.



Planting corn beneath black plastic for an early harvest makes a huge difference as this photo shows. Merv said that the corn beside of him was planted beneath plastic while the short rows in front of him were not. The corn was more than six-feet in heighth two weeks ago, and promised to be ready for harvest by July 2.

Where Family And Vegetables Flourish

About 130 laying hens provide brown eggs for customers



"When I had more time," Weaver said he made this sign with a jig saw. The sign can easily be added to or deleted to show passersby what's available.

Weeding is never ending, but the bean patch is near the stand and allows Shirley to assist customers if needed.

About 30 goats of mixed breed are pampered by Sherri, Anne, and Gwen before being sold for the meat market. The girls name all the offspring and can easily name each one.

and May to home school and work at the market. The state requires 180 days of homeschooling and that is important," she said.

Although she did not grow up on a farm, Shirley has adapted well to what she calls "never ending work."

She said, "We grow produce so that other people have healthy choices, but we are so busy I find it difficult to find time to preserve food for our own family."

She said of their roadside venture, "We are thankful to the Lord for protection and the beauty of nature. It's hard work, but enjoyable."

SUN Area Dairy Princess Crowned

SELINGSGROVE (Snyder Co.) — Selena Hollenbach of Snyder County was named SUN Area dairy princess during Ag/Dairy Days festivities at the Susquehanna Valley Mallin Selinsgrove last week, edging out Alicia Wolfe of Milton for the title.

Hollenbach won the crown after presenting a skit, 'Who Wants to Be a Moo-ionaire?" — a spoof of the popular ABC game show "Who Wants to Be a Millionaire?"

Wolfe, whose skit was a take-off on the CBS series "Survivor," was named SUN Area alternate dairy princess. Both skits, which were performed as part of the dairy princess pageant, engaged the audience as a way of imparting nutritional information about dairy products.

In addition to being named alternate dairy princess, Wolfe was the recipient of the Miss Congeniality Award, given to the contestant who displays a courteous, helpful, and friendly demeanor during the three-day Ag/Dairy Days event. The winner is selected by the dairy maids and misses using a secret ballot.

Among those helping to organize the pageant were Linda Fisher, SUN Area dairy princess committee chairwoman; Dawn Marie, Big Country Radio, and Jane Hawn, Boscov's public relations department. The three served as emcees at the pageant, which also featured a fashion show with dairy princess royalty modeling Boscov's apparel.

Now that the pageant is over, Dairy Princess Hollenbach and Alternate Dairy Princess Wolfe — along with the 16 dairy maids and misses — will undertake the charge of promoting the dairy industry throughout Snyder, Union, Northumberland and Montour Counties.

Hollenbach is the daughter of Scott and Sandy Hollenbach of Middleburg. She works on the family farm, Lochiel Dairy. The youngest of three children, she has a brother, Scott Jr., and a sister, Sabrina. The Hollenbachs own 110 dairy animals and raise alfalfa, corn and soybeans.

Hollenbach is a 2001 graduate of Selinsgrove Area High School. During her senior year she served as Selinsgrove Area High School FFA president and SUN Area FFA secretary. She has participated in public speaking contests and has been honored with the following degrees, titles and awards: Greenhand Degree, Chapter SUN Area Degree, Star Farmer of the Chapter, North Central Regional Star in the Area of Agriculture Production, FFA Keystone Degree, and the Dekalb Award for Outstanding Senior in Agriculture. Her supervised Agricultural Experience projects include a dairy herd, market lambs, beef finishing, and on-farm work experience.

In addition on working on the family farm, Hollenbach helps milk at Red Bank Meadows Farm, Middleburg. She also enjoys showing and judging dairy animals.

Wolfe, the daughter of Arthur Wolfe and Tammy Stine, is the oldest of five children; she has two sisters, Melissa and Ashley, and two brothers, Miles and Dominick. Her family's farm, Plumside Dairy, is home to 250 dairy animals, of which 200 are milked.

Wolfe will be a senior at Danville High School this fall.

For the second year she will serve as president of the Danville High School FFA Chapter. She has earned the Star Greenhand Degree and the Chapter Degree. She is also active in 4-H.

Her interests include showing dairy cattle and playing softball and soccer. She is employed part-time at Dunkin' Donuts.

Judges for the pageant included Fred Lovell, member of ADADC Board of Directors District 19 and father of the 1980 Lycoming County dairy princess; Arlene Wilbur, former dairy farmer, mother of former PA state dairy princess, and the former associate director of PDPPS; and Ed Poorman, owner of Horizons Unlimited, where he provides financial consulting and tax services.

Special guests at the pageant included outgoing SUN Area Dairy Princess and current Pennsylvania State Dairy Princess Melinda Wolfe; Pennsylvania State Alternate Dairy Princess Heidi Miller, who provided entertainment; PDPPS Executive Director Junia Isiminger; and the reigning dairy princesses from Crawford and Dauphin counties.

Outgoing SUN Area Princess Melinda Wolfe traveled more than 5,000 miles in Pennsylvania this past year to promote the dairy industry. Within the Snyder, Union, Northumberland, and Montour counties alone, she attended 15 non-farm meetings and 17 farm meetings, made more than 250 school presentations, participated in 15 other special events, and was featured in 88 newspaper articles and 132 radio spots. Nonetheless, she continued to attend college on a full-time basis during the past year and recorded a perfect grade point average. She plans to become a teacher.

While the transfer of the SUN dairy princess crown was the highlight of Ag/Dairy Days, several other festivities took place over the three-day event. Opening day, June 21, included recognition of area 4-H leaders, musical entertainment by KJ Reimensnyder, and the judging of milk carton sculptures.

Friday, June 22, featured a 7-foot-tall sundae, constructed from ice cream and toppings provided by Turkey Hill. The sundae was made with 135 gallons of ice cream, 10 gallons of chocolate fudge, 25 pounds of pecans, and 5 gallons of cherries. Dairy princess royalty, along with members of the local Future Farmers of America chapters, served 2,500 free portions of the giant sundae to the public Saturday, June 23, featured a pedal tractor pull for children. In addition, Swineford National Bank held its annual Scooper Bowl, with proceeds to be donated to the local 4-H Foundation. There also were samples of milk punch, along with a variety of dairy and agriculture related displays.

On Being a Farm Wife
(and other hazards)

Joyce Bupp

It took awhile this year.

Winter's cold hung around extra long. A good part of spring hid behind a summer-like drought. An early heat wave was followed by a misplaced Arctic cold front. Then, when it finally rained, the damp, dreary, moisty and mildewy stuff dripped for days like a leaky pipe. (And this past week, sweatshirt nights in July. Go figure.)

Frankly, we were beginning to wonder if anything was going to amount to anything, cropwise.

Then, suddenly, like the national birthday fireworks which lit our skies this past week with sparkling explosions, plants around farms and gardens have blasted into lush growth.

And the returns that farmers and gardeners alike work so hard to achieve are beginning to rain down like the aftermath of those colorful aerial displays. But way more useful. And tasty.

"Grandma, grandma! Squash!"

Before I could say the words "let's just pick the biggest ones," yellow summer squash were flying from the sprawling plants in the garden and into our garden basket. Only with some fast talking was I able to con our produce pickers into letting me keep a few of the yellow squash for our own lunch.

Of course, anytime kids are that eager to indulge in any vegetable — much less squash, of all things, we try to refrain from offering discouragement. So we moved on to discover the first zucchini large enough to accompany its bumpy-skinned yellow cousins into the saute pan.

It's the blossom end that was deformed, creating a pig-shaped zuke with a fat, stubby tail. We decided the misshapen vegetable, only about half the usual zucchini size, was either the "zucch" or the "ini" part, but weren't sure which. I found a twin to it a day later; sliced up and sauted with butter and seasonings. The interrupted growth may have resulted from the weather extremes, but it didn't affect the taste.

Mere yards from the squash colony, field corn finally decided to take the season seriously and get down to some real growth. A couple of inches of late June rain, plus several afternoons of sauna-like heat, were just what the corn needed, thank you very much. The Farmer barely managed to finish applying a booster application of nitrogen fertilizer on before the stretching corn plant had elbowed him out of the fields.

Neighbors have been working long hours combining barley and wheat, quickly baling up the straw, then immediately drilling soybeans into the fields for a second crop. Second-crop beans need a prompt summer shower to germinate and get out of the ground. A few tenths-of-inches of thunderstorm fallout within a day or two was pure serendipity. And The Farmer rejoiced because it helped rinse that liquid nitrogen down toward the corn's root zone.

Summer storms, which usually roll over the horizon right in the middle of late-afternoon milking, come as a mixed blessing. We rejoice in the moisture they often bring, but are extremely wary of their potential violence: hail, falling limbs, wind-ripped roofing, lightning threats to cattle, buildings and people...and milking/cooling systems shutdowns when the electric power dies.

After a somewhat rocky start to this crop season's weather, watching corn and hay and beans and small grains grow, day by day, is tremendously gratifying. Almost daily, we take lunch to the back porch, where we can enjoy for a few moments the response of growing things to moisture and long, sunny days. With the investment farmers have planted in the ground in seed, fertilizer, herbicide, equipment and labor, watching crops respond with favorable growth after timely rains is sheer pleasure...and part of why farmers farm.

While The Farmer ponders planting and harvest plans over lunch, I do eyeball inventory of the flower beds. What is starting to bloom, what is finished, what didn't, what should be moved, where the empty holes are, why weeds still are always twice as vigorous as anything else? And why the wild geese have suddenly decided the lower corner of the yard, at the first pond, is the place to spend every midday.

It's our own backyard entertainment center, thought-provoking, discussion-starting and, all natural.

No commercials, either.

Veal Made Easy

Naturally lean, delicious and easy to prepare, veal fits the healthful, uncomplicated way we're cooking and eating today.

Depending upon the cut and cooking method, veal can be elegant enough for the most special occasions or just right for a budget-wise week night meal.

Although veal is a popular entree when dining out, it can be simple to prepare at home and just as delicious if you use one of these recipes.

VEAL BREAST WITH OLIVE-MUSHROOM FILLING

1 boneless veal breast
2 teaspoons olive oil
⅓ cup dry Marsala
2½ cups uncooked mini lasagna or bow tie pasta, cooked

Olive-Mushroom Filling:
2 teaspoons olive oil
1 cup chopped mushrooms
1 cup diced red bell pepper
2 cloves garlic, minced
½ cup chopped pitted ripe olives
1 tablespoon finely chopped fresh rosemary or 1 teaspoon dried rosemary

Heat 2 teaspoons oil in Dutch oven over medium heat until hot. Add mushrooms, bell pepper, and garlic; cook and stir 5 minutes or until tender. Stir in olives and rosemary; cool.

Unroll veal breast; trim fat. Spread filling over veal, leaving ¼-inch border. Starting at short end, roll up jelly-roll fashion; tie with string.

Heat 2 tablespoons oil in same pan over medium heat until hot. Add veal; brown evenly. Pour off drippings. Add Marsala and ⅓ cup water; bring to a boil. Reduce heat; cover tightly and simmer 1½-1¼-hours or until veal is fork-tender.

Remove veal; keep warm. Skim fat. Bring cooking liquid to a boil; cook until reduced to ¼ cup, stirring occasionally. Carve veal. Serve over pasta with sauce. Makes 8 servings.

Searching for a recipe guaranteed to impress your guests?

Here is the perfect solution from the Beef Council — Veal Roast With Apricot-Thyme Chutney.

Shop for veal with a fine grain and creamy pink color; any fat covering should be milky white.

Refrigerate veal in the coldest section of the refrigerator. Use within 1-2 days. Freeze any veal that will not be used within two days.

For optimal flavor, juiciness, and tenderness, do not overcook veal. For roasts, use an ovenproof meat thermometer, with the tip centered in the thickest part of the veal, not touching bone or resting in fat. Remove the roast with thermometer registers 5 degrees below desired doneness. Let stand 15-20 minutes; temperature will continue to rise during standing to reach the desired temperature.

Total preparation and cooking time for the following recipe is about 2¼ hours.

VEAL ROAST WITH APRICOT-THYME CHUTNEY

1 veal rib roast, cap removed (4-5 pounds)
1 tablespoon minced fresh sage or 1 teaspoon rubbed sage
2 cloves garlic, minced
½ teaspoon cracked black pepper

Apricot-Thyme Chutney:
1 tablespoon vegetable oil
2 medium onions, sliced
1 package (6 ounces) dried apricots, coarsely chopped
1 cup ready-to-serve chicken broth
1 tablespoon sugar
1½ teaspoons cider vinegar
½ teaspoon dried thyme

Heat oven to 325 degrees. Combine sage, garlic, and pepper; press onto veal roast. Place roast, rib ends down, in shallow roasting pan. Insert ovenproof meat thermometer so tip is centered in thickest part of veal, not touching bone or resting in fat. Do not add water or cover. Roast in 325 degree oven, 25-27 minutes per pound for medium doneness.

Heat oil in large nonstick skillet over medium-low heat until hot. Add onions; cook 15-20 minutes or until soft, stirring occasionally. Stir in remaining chutney ingredients; bring to a boil.

Reduce heat; cover and simmer 20-25 minutes or until apricots are soft, stirring occasionally.

Remove roast when meat thermometer registers 155 degrees for doneness. Tent with foil; let stand 15 minutes. Temperature will continue to rise about 5 degrees to reach 160 degrees for medium. Carve roast between bones. Serve with chutney. Makes 8-10 servings.

Summertime Snacking

Vacations, camp, sports, swimming, picnics, and more! During the summer months, these activities are often featured and can alter your regular schedule. You and your family are very active at this time of year, but do not forget to ensure that your eating patterns are keeping up with your busy day.

Snacking has become a natural part of one's day. You may have been advised to avoid snacks as they would "spoil" your appetite for the following meal, but snacking can provide up to one-fourth of a child's nutrients each day. This is especially true now since scheduled breakfast and lunch routines are not as planned as they are during the school year. In addition, youngsters and adolescents are often more active during this season and require more energy to keep them going.

Because energy needs are high, often children and teens don't eat enough at each meal to meet their daily requirements for calories and other key nutrients such as iron, calcium, and vitamins A and C. Children have smaller appetites and may not eat as much as expected at each meal, thus, snacking can allow them to make up for what they may miss at mealtime. And teens often make their own food choices, which can result in avoidance essential vitamins and minerals. Their selections are often higher in the less desirable nutrients such as fat, sugars, salt and cholesterol, and empty calories.

Snack time can be a place where healthful foods are offered. The roles of good nutrition apply here. Everyone requires a variety of foods to ensure that they are receiving all the nutrients that they need for proper growth and development. Follow the Food Guide Pyramid and the following tips to guide you.

• Have healthful foods at home — Try to keep a variety of foods from each group from the Food Guide Pyramid in your pantry or refrigerator. This begins with selecting the right kind of foods at the store.

• Look for food items that may be high in nutrients like iron, calcium, protein, fiber, and vitamins like A and C. These can be fruits, vegetables, milk, and grain products.

• Do not often buy foods that are high in calories, fat, cholesterol, salt, and sugar.

• Serve beverages such as low-fat chocolate or white milk, water, and juices that are made with 100 percent juice (apple, grape, orange, pineapple). Look on the label! Beverages are part of snacking and can easily sneak empty calories and sugar into your child's diet.

Snacking can be simple. Have your children involved in the planning. When you make your grocery list or visit the market, have your children select the healthful foods, like fruits, vegetables, yogurts, cheeses, cereal, and other grains that they like to eat. Include them in the preparation or plan for snacks that are easy to put together without much mixing, cooking, and clean up. Often snacks are just one item or two to three simple foods combined with each other. They may not even require adult supervision, are fun to make, and can be eaten on the go. Here are some ideas:

• Serve cold cereal with milk or yogurt, topped with fresh fruit or raisins.

• Toast a bagel/bread with cheese or peanut butter, top with raisins, nuts or seeds.

• Blend together can or fresh fruit, milk or yogurt, juice and ice cubes for a smoothie.

• Use packaged items like low fat pudding, granola bars, dried fruit to eat on the go.

• Prepare raw vegetables alone or combine with dip, peanut butter or cottage cheese.

• Many fresh fruits are their own container (and no clean up) — good to go.

• Mix cottage cheese with granola or canned or fresh fruit.

• Suggest leftovers from yesterday's dinner.

• Fill an apple or banana halves with peanut butter — add some nuts go nuts.

• Try crackers or pita bread with cheese or meat stuck on top or inside.

• Put raw veggies, and a bit of dressing into a tortilla and roll up.

Remember that you are a role model for the children in your life. Select the same types of food for your snacks. They are nutritious and may be lower in calories than some of the other snacks out there. It is equally important that you get the essential nutrients as well. Enjoy your summer and eat well.

For more snack ideas and nutrition information, contact your county's Penn State Cooperative Extension Office. Ask for a publication entitled: "The ABC's of Growing Healthy Kids — Keep on Snacking."

Penn State Students Wage 'Penny War' To Benefit Farm Family

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Agricultural fraternities and a sorority at Penn State's University Park campus raised nearly $800 for an AgrAbility farm family through their annual "Penny War" competition.

"For the third year, the fraternities and sorority coordinated and administered this event as a way of giving back to the agricultural community," says Linda Fetzer, Penn State project assistant and outreach coordinator for AgrAbility for Pennsylvanians.

Ronnie Sands from Delta Theta Sigma coordinated the event. Alpha Zeta hosted the Penny War banquet at which the check was presented to the McElwee family of Franklin County.

Tom and Becky McElwee attended the banquet with their son, Tyler, and vocational agriculture teacher, Gerry Reichard. Tyler was involved in an ATV accident and sustained a spinal cord injury. The Penny War funds will be used to modify the family's skid steer loader from foot control to hand control. This modification will allow Tyler to return to work at the family's receiving station, where they purchase and sell cattle as well as transport cattle to various parts of the country.

Penny War funds are collected by each fraternity and sorority and a traveling trophy is awarded to the group that collects the most funds. This year's trophy was awarded to Alpha Gamma Rho for collecting $522.97.

"AgrAbility for Pennsylvanians applauds the efforts of the agricultural fraternities and sororities for making a difference in the lives of a farmer with a disability who desires to continue working in production agriculture," says Fetzer.

AgrAbility for Pennsylvanians is a part of a national information and technology network for farmers and farm families who continue to farm despite medical or physical limitations. This statewide project is a collaborative effort between Penn State Cooperative Extension and Easter Seals Central Pennsylvania and receives funding through the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

AgrAbility services include onsite assessments of farm operations, information on assistive technology for farm worksites, peer/caregiver support, referral services, professional education and public awareness.

ANSWER — Here are some tasty tips to make iced coffee, a refreshing drink to give you an energy boost or to beat the heat.

• Select blends of coffee that use 100 percent high quality Arabica coffee beans and stay away from lower quality Robusta coffee beans.

• Use a burr grinder instead of a propeller blade grinder to ensure that coffee is ground to a consistent particle size.

• To brew a full-flavored pot of iced coffee, double the strength of the coffee. Use four level teaspoons of ground coffee for every cup you brew.

• After brewing, add enough ice coffee to double the volume. The melting ice weakens the coffee taste which is why you must brew iced coffee stronger in the beginning.

• To keep your iced coffee cool and fresh, store in an airtight container in airtight container in refrigerator.

• Make only enough iced coffee to last through one day. The shelf life of iced coffee is approximately eight hours before flavor begins to deteriorate.

• When serving iced coffee, don't be afraid to add milk, cream or sugar to sweeten and lighten to your liking.

• Don't store coffee in refrigerator or freezer. Coffee beans absorb moisture and aromas around them. Store coffee in opaque, airtight container in a cool, dry place.

Sweet Corn Is Here

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — "We are harvesting our first sweet corn of the season now," reports Fred Funk, Lancaster County vegetable grower and vice chairman of the Pennsylvania vegetable marketing and research program. "The cool weather this spring delayed the crop some, but with the recent warm weather and rain, consumers can expect a good crop of 'Simply Delicious' sweet corn this season," he added.

The first corn to be harvested is that grown under clear plastic covers placed over the rows of corn. The clear plastic acts as a miniature greenhouse, trapping the heat from the sun and conserving soil moisture. This warm moist environment is ideal for rapid seed germination and seedling development in cool April days. Planting under the plastic mulch represents a greater investment for the grower in terms of time, equipment and supplies, but enables the grower to hit the early market.

The key to good sweet corn is freshness. The sugar in sweet corn rapidly begins turning to starch within hours after being harvested. About 40 percent of the sugar can be lost in six hours at room temperature. Refrigeration slows this process, but the sooner corn is eaten after harvesting, the better.

Many growers are growing sugar-enhanced or supersweet varieties that genetically have more sugar in the kernels. Some of these early sugar-enhanced varieties where developed at Penn State University. Because they have more sugar to begin with, they can be stored for longer periods and still have acceptable sweetness. However, standard sweet corn varieties, when purchased freshly harvested, will still have a delicious, traditional corn flavor and sweetness.

According to growers across the state, most Pennsylvanians prefer bi-color corn, traditionally known as Butter and Sugar. However, in south central and southeastern Pennsylvania, white is the preferred corn. Certain localities and clienteles still like their corn to be yellow, so many growers also grow some yellow varieties.

Regardless of the color, Pennsylvanians can expect to enjoy an abundant supply of sweet corn each year. It is the leading vegetable crop in the commonwealth with about 18,000 acres grown annually. Most of this sweet corn acreage is grown for fresh market sales. As a result, Pennsylvania ranks as the ninth largest freshmarket sweet corn producing state in the nation. Fresh corn will be available from July into October. About 3,000 acres of the sweet corn acreage are grown to be processed into frozen, dried or canned corn products available year around.

While fresh sweet corn is a delicious ingredient in many recipes, it is most popular served right on the cob, and is so simple to prepare. Simply boil husked ears for about five minutes, or grill the ears in the husk for 15-20 minutes after soaking them in water for about 10 minutes. Fresh corn on the cob is also easily prepared in the microwave by wrapping two husked ears in a damp paper towel and cooking them for seven minutes on high power, turning the ears once.

Noted Lancaster County cookbook author Betty Groff sharess favorite sweet corn recipes from her best-selling cookbooks:

2 Tablespoons butter or vegetable oil for frying

Thoroughly mix corn, egg, salt, sugar, pepper, flour and any favorite herb. Heat the butter or oil in a heavy skillet. Drop the corn mixture by Tablespoons into the hot fat, browning until golden on each side. Provide powdered sugar, honey or maple syrup or any desired personal favorites.

Corn And Spinach Casserole

1 Tablespoon butter
3 cups fresh or frozen corn kernels
2 eggs beaten
½ cup milk
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon freshly ground pepper
1 Tablespoon white wine vinegar
½ pound fresh spinach, coarsely chopped
2 Tablespoons grated parmesan cheese

¼ cup dried bread crumbs

Cover with bacon slices. Top with bread crumbs and bake in a preheated 375°F oven for 45 minutes. This recipe can also be microwaved for 15 minutes. If microwaved, let stand for 3 to 5 minutes before serving. Excellent served with roast veal, pork, pheasant or chicken.

Lancaster County Conducts 4-H Presentation Night

MICHELLE RANCK
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Twenty-one 4-H'ers recently gathered at the Farm and Home Center for presentation night, an evening which gives participants not only an opportunity to hone their public speaking skills but also qualify them to move on to state competition.

Three categories of presentations gave 4-H'ers a choice. Prepared speeches with visuals, or presentations, allowed 4-H'ers to use the props for a demonstration. An impromptu speech challenged the lone participant, Lisa Hershey of Kirkwood, as she was given a topic relating to 4-H 10 minutes before she took the stage. 4-H'ers giving a prepared speech with no visuals were considered to be in the public speech category.

The presentations were prepared ahead of time and had a time limit. Props such as posters or costumes helped the young presenters.

The evening included speeches by juniors age 8-12 and senior public speakers age 13-19. Six judges from the community evaluated the speeches, photography, posters, and one essay on display during the evening.

Participants age 13 years old or older with a blue-ribbon speech had the opportunity to move on to state competition at 4-H achievement days, a three-day event conducted in Penn State this July.

"Coming to this evening is a first step for them. They have the judge's comments and can take their speech back and rework it," said Lancaster 4-H coordinator Katina Showman.

4-Hers giving a prepared speech with no visuals — the public speech category — included, from left, Angela Nicholl, Little Britain; Christine Keefer, Peach Bottom; Lori Hess, Pequea; Claire Varner, Manheim; Jenee High, Ephrata; Devan DeBeneditto, Pequea; Jackie Case, Elizabethtown; Mark Lefever, Quarryville; Benjamin Rayburn, Paradise; and Mandie Holloway, Peach Bottom.

Cherry-Crest Farm Expands To 10 Acres Of Fun For The Whole Family

PARADISE (Lancaster Co.) — The art of the maze is taken very seriously at Cherry-Crest Farm, a working Holstein dairy operation in the heart of the Pennsylvania Dutch Country that each year transforms a five-acre cornfield into one of America's most intriguing labyrinths of paths.

Corny renderings have been made of the Liberty Bell, Noah's Ark, an Amish buggy, a huge locomotive, even the solar system. This year the maze reflects the classic song Old MacDonald's Farm, with a gigantic barn, silo, windmill and tractor neatly cut out of rows of corn.

Open July 7 through October 27, Cherry-Crest Farm has expanded its roster of activities into three venues — the barnyard and the courtyard, and the sixth annual Amazing Maize Maze™ as the headline event. More than a walk through the stalks, Cherry-Crest's maze is the world's largest interactive game with music, kernels of knowledge and a script, scenic bridges, clues and a puzzle map to find the quickest way out, an Amish phone booth (hidden in an out-house!) and Telestalks™ to call for help, and two maze masters to keep visitors on track.

"Our goal," states Maze Manager Rudy Kilgore, "is to make each year's design an extraordinary experience — a maze that is fun and educational, and genuinely ties into the quality of life on the farm."

In addition to solving the maze (this year visitors can choose between an easy or difficult challenge), Old MacDonald's Farm offers amusing diversions along the way, from a misting station to cool off, rubber duck races and a pig calling contest, a cow that can be milked like the Real McCoy, a tractor and a "hay mow" for climbing, a silo for sliding, a telescope to search for clues in the hillside, even a corral of saddled wooden horses that educates and is fun for family photographs.

The phone booth also comes in handy for clues, as visitors can call the maze office for a recording, or a friend who can use a special code to locate a "You are here" on the maze's web site. A web cam also gives web browsers sneak peaks of maze activities.

And there's still more to see and do. In the courtyard there's the Furry Friends Petting Farm where Daisy the Goat remains a star attraction, a Hands-On Farm Ed Center with interactive displays and live baby chicks hatchery, a Kids' Corral for outdoor play, the Rain Room, plus great rides like the Moon Trike Maze, Cherry-Crest Farm Express, and Hee-Haw Hay Ride that includes guided tours of the 175-acre working dairy and poultry operation.

On an adjoining hillside is the Barnyard, with the popular Hay Jump Tent, Pumpkin Slinger and Giant Hay Chute Slide, a scenic farm-view walk, and Cherry-Crest's famous floral artwork — this year an 11,000 square foot "Crowing Rooster and Sun" that's created out of thousands of petunias and marigolds. There are six minute milk mazes that are real brain teasers, and food and picnic areas. During September and October, the Barnyard is also home to the Fall Farm Market, where visitors can pull an express wagon through four acres of pumpkins, popcorn, and a field of 27 different varieties of beautiful mums to pick and take home.

There's also a great schedule of special events — from Kids Pedal Tractor Pulls to lively Dairy and Corn Exhibitions, a series of Saturday Harvest Roundup Festivals, plus a scenic place to walk and enjoy a picnic and the beautiful Lancaster County countryside. You can even catch a ride to the maze aboard the historic Strasburg Railroad's short line steam train that stops at Cherry-Crest Farm throughout the day.

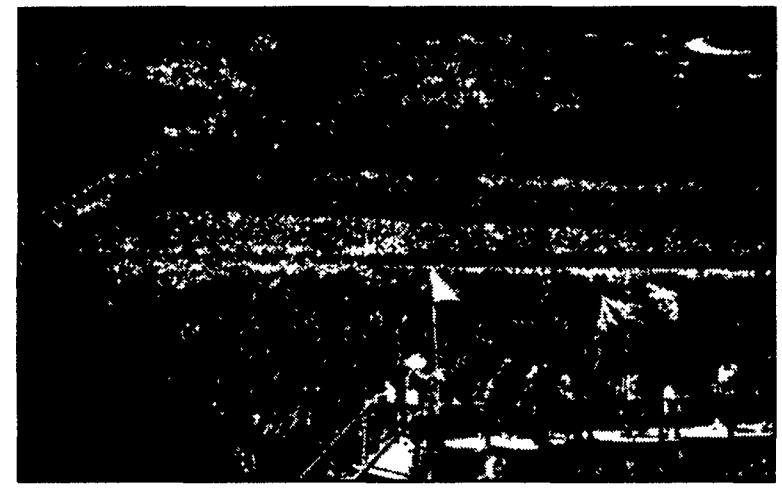
Location: Cherry-Crest Farm is ideally situated in the heart of the Pennsylvania Dutch Country about eight miles east of Lancaster off of Rt. 741 — two miles east of Strasburg, Paradise Township. Plenty of free parking is available adjacent to the maze.

Summer hours (July 7 through Aug. 31) are: Tuesday-Thursday, 10 a.m.-5 p.m.; Friday-Saturday, 10 a.m. until dusk. Fall hours (Sept. 1-Oct. 27 including all legal holiday Mondays) are: Friday-Saturday, 10 a.m. until dusk, Legal Holiday Mondays, 10 a.m.-5 p.m. During September and October, visitors can also trek through four acres of pumpkins and a field of 27 different varieties of mums, as part of Cherry-Crest Farm's "Pick Your Own To Take Home" (Sept. 7-Oct. 27) Friday-Saturday, 10 a.m. until dusk.

Open weather permitting. Last entrance to the maze 90 minutes prior to closing. Cherry-Crest Farm is closed Sundays.

Admission to the farm (includes the maze plus all activities in the courtyard and barnyard) is $9.50 (age 12 and over), $7.50 for kids age 5 to 11, $5 for kids age 3-4. Last entrance to maze 90 minutes prior to closing. The popular Flashlight Maze is held Oct. 19-20 and Oct. 26-27, 7-11 p.m. The only time the maze is open after dark, the Flashlight Maze offers a fright-free alternative to Halloween. (Make sure to bring your own flashlights!).

For more information and a free brochure, call or write: Cherry-Crest Farm, 150 Cherry Hill Road, Ronks, PA 17572. Telephone: (717) 687-6843. Fax: (717) 687-8143. Or check the web, at www.cherrycrestfarm.com. There is also a two-unit guest house that incorporates a large play area and private zoo for the kids. The maze is available for school tours, corporate team building and company picnics, birthdays and private parties.



Old MacDonald's Farm sets the theme for this year's Amazing Maize Maze™ at Cherry-Crest Farm in Lancaster County. Billed as the world's largest interactive game, the five acre mind boggler includes music, script and clues, plus a full roster of down-home activities from hayrides and pumpkin slinging to a Furry Friends Petting Farm and Hands-On Farm Ed Center. Cherry-Crest is also famous for its gigantic floral hillside artwork, like the 11,000 square foot Sun, Moon and Stars shown above that was created out of petunias and marigolds.

Pennies Add Up To Thousands For Charity

LINDA WILLIAMS
Bedford Correspondent

BREEZEWOOD (Bedford Co.) — How large is a million?

It's a question to which the students in grades kindergarten through 12 at Breezewood Elementary needed an answer.

Breezewood is a rural school with a census ranging from 120 to 140. Being small, grades are able to work on various projects together.

The teachers thought about the million question and came up with various ideas. One thought of a million pull tabs, another a million bottle caps. "But that kind of collection had no real purpose," says Cathy Clark, second grade teacher at Breezewood.

When someone suggested a million pennies, Cathy liked the idea so well, she volunteered to chair the project.

A million pennies total $10,000 and the next decision to be made was, "What will we do with $10,000?"

Students and teachers together decided to donate $5,000 to charity and $5,000 would be saved for a school project.

During the next seven years, the students raised pennies by having pizza parties, Sunday parties, popcorn parties, baby picture contests, a pie in the fact contest, and carnivals with a dunking booth, sand art, ring toss, and food booths.

"We did almost anything we could think of to raise pennies," Cathy says.

The lessons learned were used in math, social studies, community services, decision making and self-esteem.

On Sunday afternoons, Cathy, her husband, Jim, and several other volunteers would get together to count the pennies and transport them to the bank where the Breezewood Elementary account was rapidly growing. Cathy laughingly admits she became almost addicted to pennies.

"I warned my husband that any change in the washing machine was fair game," she says.

On a shopping trip she was delighted to find nearly 40 pennies scattered about a parking lot.

This past spring, the goal of one million pennies was achieved with WTAJ television personality Carolyn Donaldson putting in the last penny.

An assembly complete with cake and punch highlighted the event with the children presenting checks to their favorite charities. Included with the Pennsylvania Association for the Blind, the American Red Cross, the American Cancer Society, the Bedford County Humane Society and DARE.

Each organization was presented with a $1000 large plastic covered check for hanging and a small paper check for banking. Students presented a program with cutouts, hats and other props. They had bits of philosophy and quaint bits of verse to add to the presentations.

Teachers helping with the production of this program as well as raising the pennies were Miriam Peck, Bev Young, Carol Wichterman, Jim Droz, and Kris Troutman.

Students from each grade reaching up to senior status were also present. They were happy to see the completion of the project they started in their early elementary years.

Twenty-four percent of the total was raised the first year, 17 percent in the second; 15 percent in the third; 12 percent in the fourth; 15 percent in the fifth; 12 percent in the sixth; and the remaining 5 percent during this past year.

Cathy Clark's husband, Jim, emceed the event and pointed out that an average of $16,873 was raised during each nine month school year. That equals 794 pennies per day; 113 pennies per hour, or 28 cents every 15 minutes of each school year.

Breezewood Elementary students donated $1,000 to DARE to combat drug usage.

Garden Of Fashions Fills Capital Region Stage

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family
Features Editor

CUMBERLAND VALLEY (Cumberland Co.) A swirl of colors and fashions filled the stage of the Cumberland Valley Eagle View Middle School last Thursday evening.

Called the Garden of Fashion, the event spotlighted the talents of 74 4-H'ers from seven different counties. These 4-H'ers selected patterns and fabrics to stitch an outfit that flattered their build and personality. When finished, they needed to model their fashions and place in the top level at their local Fashion Revue competition in their respective counties before being eligible to proceed to regional competition.

An amazing array of talent assembled on the stage, but even then, some of the ingenuity and tedious detail remained hidden from the audience. For example, the audience could see that Matthew Reichard had stitched a classic tailored jacket, pants, and shirt. But hidden inside were details that ensured the tailored fit. Matthew had used horsehair canvas for interlining and made his own shoulder pads and sleeveheads for the jacket.

The perfect fit wasn't achievable by simply following a pattern. Most of the participants needed to measure, adjust, sew, and rip numerous seams before they were satisfied.

Not all that looked perfect to the audience passed the scrutiny of judges who had a close up examination of the outfit and its wearer. Selecting gold and blue ribbon winners in junior and senior divisions were judges Karen Hess, Vicki Caruso, Nancy Class, Fran Horst, and Liz Ricker.

Only the senior gold ribbon recipients will continue to state competition. The senior blue ribbon winners serve as alternates in case one of the gold ribbon winners is unable to attend the state event on July 25.

The regional event was as far as the junior gold ribbon winners will advance. According to Mary Ann Olyer, Franklin County family living agent, participation in Fashion Revue helps members achieve self confidence, learn about wardrobe selection, the importance of good posture, physical fitness and other grooming tips.

These senior gold ribbon winners will advance to state competition: Lindsay Burkhart, Lancaster; Patricia Grieggs, Dauphin; Beth Parrish, York; Matthew Reinhart, Franklin; Madelyn Snyder, Dauphin; Sara Ann Oyler, Adams; Sarah Graybill, Lancaster; Sara Krall, Lebanon, and Elizabeth Criswell, Lancaster.

Gold ribbon winners at the Capital Region, which includes the counties of Adams, Cumberland, Dauphin, Franklin, Lancaster, Lebanon, and York, include the following:

• Sara Oyler, Adams County, who wore a khaki shirt and checkered shirt outfit. The short skirt features front darts, front waistband and elastic around the back. The three-quarter length sleeved shirt of 100 percent cotton fabric promoted a sporty look. The sleeve bottoms had notch detailing. Sara made a coordinating scrunchie.

• Matthew Reichard, Franklin County, stitched a tailored jacket and pants combination. The black gabardine dress slacks featured straight legs with side front pockets and back welt pockets. The blue/black plaid patterned wool jacket had a back pleat for ease and comfort.

Matthew said that he found it interesting working with horsehair canvas in the slacks and jacket. He even made his own shoulder pads and sleeveheads for the jacket.

• Sarah Krall, Lebanon, stitched a two-piece evening gown with front and back princess seams and an invisible zipper. The cranberry ballina fabric was her 10th year sewing project.

• Beth Parrish, York, modeled an evening length gown with contrasting, close-fitting bodice and raised waist. The fully-lined dress, made of crepe black satin featured a black pleat.

The 17-year-old has been sewing for 11 years.

• Lindsay Burkhart, Lancaster County, stitched a double-breasted pea coat and jeans. The coat was made of gray wool with set in pockets hidden by welts and a vent in the back. Demonstrating ingenuity, Lindsay figured out how to add lining to the jacket made from an unlined pattern. Gold-colored topstitching on the back pockets and inside seams of the flared jeans required precise straightness.

• Elizabeth Criswell, Lancaster County, selected a semi-formal fitted, lined dress of sheer black, flocked polyester over a royal blue polyester sheath. She wrapped up her outfit with a navy blue jacket of stretch velvet. For her seventh year sewing project, Elizabeth altered the patterns to create the outfit she envisioned.

• Sarah Graybill, Lancaster County, stitched a denim jacket, tan pants, and purple shirt to create her outfit. The dark denim jacket featured pockets and buttons down the front. The contrasting gold-colored thread on the jacket was difficult to sew. The tan-colored cotton pants had an invisible zipper and darts. The spaghetti strapped purple shirt contrasted with the outfit.

• Patricia Grieggs, Dauphin, made a pink-lined sundress of 100 percent rayon with an invisible zipper, front and back darts, and a ruffle to accent the neck and hem lines. She used 100 percent polyester lining that is antistatic for comfortable wear.

• Madeline Snyder, Dauphin County, purchased a burgundy and black paisley print of 100 percent rayon challis to make a fully-lined, princess seamed dress. The dress had narrow shoulder straps and an invisible back zipper.

Madeline added her own sense of style to the total look with the addition of decorative beads along the hemline.

Junior gold ribbon winners were Megan Parsons, Lancaster; Rachel Siegel, Lebanon; Anna Gilbert, Adams; Bretney Endy, Dauphin; Katie McGinnis, Dauphin; and Katie Weaver, Lancaster.

Junior blue ribbon winners were Jasmine Martin, Lancaster; Olivia Hostettler, Adams; Laura Umberger, Lebanon; Katrina Oyler, Adams; Brooke Umberger, Lebanon; and Marlee Beckner, Franklin.

Junior gold ribbon winners include Katee Weaver, Bretney Endy, Katie McGinnis, Megan Parsons, Rachel Siegel, and Anna Gilbert.

Wildwood Flower

She is waiting for me, 'neath the rose covered bower.
Her eyes are violets after a shower.
For she's draming sweet dreams in the long summer hours.
She's my sweetheart, my own frail wildwood flower.
All the wild forest creatures are under her spell
On her shoulder, the dove its secrets will tell.
All the sky dappled fawns come to lie at her feet.
She's my own wild flower so gentle so sweet.
I will pick tender blossoms to twine in her hair.
Blushing roses so red and the lilies so fair.
Lovely myrtle so bright with its emerald blue
Modest buttercups, yellow forget-me-nots too.
No artist can paint her, no poet can write
How she warms this cold world like a sunbeam so bright.
Her laughter it echoes like ripples at play
And my cares like my heart she has stolen away.
Hand in hand through the wildwood together we stray.
She will sing, she will dance, and my heart she wile away.
I shall love and protect her and never depart.
From this frail wildwood flower that twines round my heart.

Bury Me Not On The Lone Prairie

O' bury me not on the lone prairie
These words came sad, and mournfully
From the pallid lips of a youth who lay
On his dying bed, at the close of day.
It matters not, so I've been told
Where the body lies, when the heart grows cold
But grant o' grant, this wish to me
Bury me not on the lone prairie.
Bury me not on the lone prairie
Where coyotes how, the wind blows free
In a narrow grove, six by three
O' bury me not on the lone prairie.
O' bury me not, his voice failed there
We took no heed, of his dying prayer
In a narrow grave, six by three
We buried him there, on the lone prairie.
And the cowboys now, as they roam the plains
They mark a spot, where his bones were laid
Fling a handful of roses, for his grave
With a prayer to God, His soul to save.

Ida's Notebook

by

Ida Risser

Summer months in the garden bring many different jobs. The first and most important is planting the seeds and plants. Without this job accomplished, nothing is accomplished.

The first harvest is lettuce and sugar peas. I've planted three kinds of peas and so the harvest is stretched out for three weeks. In fact, I let them bloom a second time, so I can harvest some in July.

This year I put 180 tiny onions in the ground, and have been pulling tender ones to eat most everyday. Garden cress is one of my favorites as the taste is similar to watercress. It grows quickly and must be cut regularly or it will go to seed.

The red fox that we see in the meadow below our garden must not be eating regularly. At least, he is not catching all of the baby bunnies that live here. We have caught several in a box trap in my garden and transported them to another part of the farm, but they keep coming back to feast on my row of beans. They did not find the earliest ones, so we have been eating some.

Somedays I must forget the garden and pick berries. As soon as the strawberries are over, we must climb the hill behind our house and pick black raspberries. That is one crop that we have no trouble getting rid of as most people welcome a box or two.

The broccoli has been frozen and the cabbage is ready to harvest. Now I want to lay bags under my dozen tomato plants to keep the weeds down. Despite weather conditions, the weeds continue to grow in our gardens.

Delaware County 4-H Livestock Auction

Plan now to buy a high quality, grain fed pork or lamb at the annual Delaware County 4-H Summer Fair Livestock Auction on Saturday afternoon, Aug. 11. Suburban families are encouraged to participate in the auction.

4-H volunteers will arrange for your animal to be transported to the USDA licensed butcher. Buyers complete a "cutting order" specifying the cuts and packaging for their meat, then pick up the frozen, packaged meat from the butcher later in the month.

Youth members at the 4-H Farm and Educational Center in Newtown Square raise the market animals. The 4-H Agricultural Club gives suburban children the opportunity to have hands on experience at a working farm. By cooperatively raising sheep and pigs, members learn what it takes to produce the meat they see for sale in supermarkets. At the culmination of the market animal project, members offer hogs and sheep for sale to people who are interested in putting high quality, grain fed meat in their freezer.

For those unable to attend, lambs may be purchased for $200 and hogs for $300 anytime prior to the auction date. For more information, please call Joyce Morrison, 4-H coordinator at (610) 690-2655 or Bonnie Magliochetti, fair volunteer at (610) 566-1011.

The Pony World's 'Best Kept Secret'

MICHELLE RANCK
Lancaster Farming Staff

AIRVILLE (York Co.) — "They're unique and probably one of the pony world's best-kept secrets. People don't know about the POA breed, but once they find out, they're hooked," said Nikki Rineholt.

Rineholt, along with husband Brad, "ride, show, train, and breed," Pony of the Americas (POA) animals. The couple now has 24 adults and 10 babies on their 62-acre "Nick of Time Farm," which includes a stallion and junior stallion.

"They're docile, very friendly, and trainable. That's the whole point of the breed, is that they can be trained by kids. Young children can handle and train to ride them," said Reinholt. The ponies can also be trained to drive.

"They're great for kids," said Rineholt, who attests to their "great personality and disposition," and pointing out that children even 10-years old can show the stallions.

The national organization is, in fact, expressly for people 18 years old and under, although an adult program also exists. Forty POA clubs, which may sponsor scholarships or pony giveaways, are found nationally, according to Rineholt. Show classes are based around children and "shows are a good family environment," she said.

"It's a good place for 4-H kids to go, since it's the next level of showing before moving onto to horses," said Nikki.

The foals can be born solid and within six months have a frost or "roan out." Ponies must have color to enter the show ring, although solid ponies may serve as breeding stock.

"They're docile, very friendly, and trainable. That's the whole point of the breed," says POA owner, breeder, and trainer Nikki Rineholt.

Breed History

The breed traces its roots to a Mason City, Iowa, according to Website information. An attorney who purchased an Arab/Appaloosa mare accidentally bred by a Shetland pony saw potential in the foal, which eventually became the foundation sire for the breed.

Original standards set the pace for the breed's characteristics: the head was to be small and dished as the Arab; the body was to be muscled as the Quarter Horse; and the coloring had to be Appaloosa. The registry went from the original stallion in 1954 to 1996's registry of over 40,000.

The breed can be identified by three characteristics. The ponies have striped hooves and "sclera," or the white ring around the brown part of the eye, a trait of the Appaloosa breed. The ponies also have mottled skin around the eyes, genital areas, or nose.

Coat color patterns acceptable to registry include "leopards," or large spots; "blankets," or solid up front with a patch of color over the rump; "frosted," a solid color with a scattering of color; a "few spot," or basically white with color along with snowflake, or marbleized roan.

The height requirement is 46-56 inches, and ponies range anywhere in that specification.

"We try to breed for all sizes. Ponies are meant for children, so you should have all sizes, just like you have all sizes of children," she said.

"My husband, who is 6'3", rides. They can carry basically anybody — they're not just for kids," said Rineholt, who adds that they have sold their ponies to older women who are looking for something "a little closer to the ground" to ride.

Versatility is also a hallmark of the breed. They can compete in halter, riding, jumping, and game classes in competition.

The Foals

Although foaling season has kept the Rineholts close to home, as soon as the last foal is on the ground, the show tour will begin. With halter classes available, even the foals will participate.

The foals can be born solid and within six months have a frost or roan out. Ponies must have color to enter the show ring, although solid ponies may serve as breeding stock.

The POA is economical and affordable, said Rineholt. Class entry prices are $4 and include classes such as Western pleasure, reining, trail, leadline equitation, hunter, hack, costume, showmanship, barrel racing, goat tying. The over-300 shows per year consist of three separate age groups for youth.

Prices for the ponies start at $1,000. "A good, quiet kids' pony will range from $3,000-$5,000," she said. Top show horses, however, have reached from $12,000 to a private sale of $25,000.

Born this spring, the foals will grow to be 46-56 inches in height. "We try to breed for all sizes. Ponies are meant for children, so you should have all sizes, just like you have all sizes of children," she said.

Working with ponies, said Rineholt, teaches valuable life lessons. Since children can not only groom, clip, and show the animals but also finish their pony's training, "kids feel fulfilled when they do the work."

"You can turn your kids loose and you don't have to worry," she said, adding that the some ponies even prefer being handled by children.

Not Just A Phase

Originally from Harford County, Maryland, Rineholt "always just loved horses," proving that her passion was "not just a phase," as her parents first believed.

She began taking riding lessons from her first grade teacher and later worked in the barn to earn lessons. "I did anything I could to ride them. I worked to board or ride the horses," she said. Rineholt has been showing POAs since she was six years old and is sold on the quality of the breed.

Rineholt and her husband, Brad, a farrier for 21 years, met at an Appaloosa operation where she was a trainer. They were married four years later, last October, in the arena of their new farm. The new run-in shed was built with wedding money. Their current property has their fingerprints as they recently put in the fencing, arena, pasture water system, and barn that Nikki designed.

She now allows her own riding students to help clean the barn in exchange for riding lessons, as she once did. Other plans include offering services such as clinics and summer camps.

Nikki, who also showed horses on the Appaloosa circuit, has logged thousands of miles traveling from show ring to show ring. The breed added Register of Merit Awards for halter, performance and gaming. A POA earning all three receives the highest of all awards, Supreme Champion.

In pursuit of earning the points necessary to receive the supreme champion title, she traveled from show to show before "Campbell's Dreamcatcher" earned the title. The experience was a good one, however, as she especially enjoys the "big family" of POA breeders and show ring participants.

Clubs offer a variety of events from "play day" shows and clinics to cookouts, trail rides and awards banquets. For more information check out the Website at www.poac.org or write to the Pony of the Americas Club, Inc.; 5240 Elmwood Avenue; Indianapolis, IN 46203. Phone (317) 788-0107, e-mail poac@iquest.net.

Antique Autos Roll Into Museum Spotlight

LOU ANN GOOD

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — Like most of the 63,000 members of the Antique Automobile Club of America (AACA), Bill Smith did not start out collecting antique cars. He was one of those teen-age guys who found a car no one wanted and fixed it up to have something to run.

"I was 14-years-old and fixed up a Model A Ford. That was before I had my driving license, so I drove it around our orchard," Smith said.

No other family members shared Smith's passion for fixing up old cars. His mother expressed her frustration for his hobby by saying, "You waste so much time with those old cars."

But Smith proudly tells people that the first word he spoke was "car."

"My crib was placed next to a window that overlooked the neighborhood garage, and I could watch all them pump gas into the cars that stopped by," Smith said.

Growing up he spent a lot of time at the "mom and pop" garage. I learned by watching. And if I wanted to know anything, I just asked," he said.

Smith's first venture into restoring an antique car was not entirely pleasurable. He said that a friend talked him into going into partnership with him in restoring a 1927 Model T Roadster Ford pickup. Smith donated his share before seeing the vehicle.

"It was in a basement backed up to a coal furnace. Over the years, the ashes had been dumped into the bed of the truck. When Smith saw the overflowing ashes that partially hid the truck, he was furious.

The ashes had eaten away the metal.

"I figured my friend had taken me for a Model T ride," Smith said.

It took Smith four years and parts collected from 13 states to restore it. But he won first prize a the AACA show based on the excellence for original finish, maintenance, and workmanship.

That success, of course, spurred Smith to take on more projects.

Restoring a car to it's original appearance with gleaming chrome, a smooth-running engine, and wheels, becomes a passionate pursuit for those who try it.

"Like golf and all hobbies, restoring cars is expensive, but it balances out for the pleasure derived from it," Smith said.

Now executive director of AACA Museum, Smith's fascination with automobiles never dims.

Unlike most antiques, automobiles are in a league of their own.

"To be considered an antique, cars need to be 25 years old," said Smith.

The average person who joins AACA is about 30 years old. That's the age when he looks back and remembers his first car and says, "Hey, I wish I had that old Ford Mustang or whatever ....," Smith said.

When searching for parts to fix up older cars, the novice discovers people with similar interests and strong friendships are forged.

It's a natural progression to advance from restoring dilapidated autos to going to shows and starting another project.

The AACA provides a fountain of information and reliable source for car buffs. Members of AACA attend monthly meetings at regional chapters. The subjects change from month to month but includes sessions on insurance, paint, upholstery, and restoration expertise.

Chapter dues are $26 annually. Members receive a monthly magazine and are eligible to participate in all national functions, meets, and tours.

The AACA was formed in 1935 in the Philadelphia area by 14 men. It has grown to 406 chapters with 63,000 members worldwide. In the early 1950s, the annual shows were moved to the Hershey area.

"Today the annual show is the largest auto show and flea market," Smith said. More than 250,000 people attended last year's show.

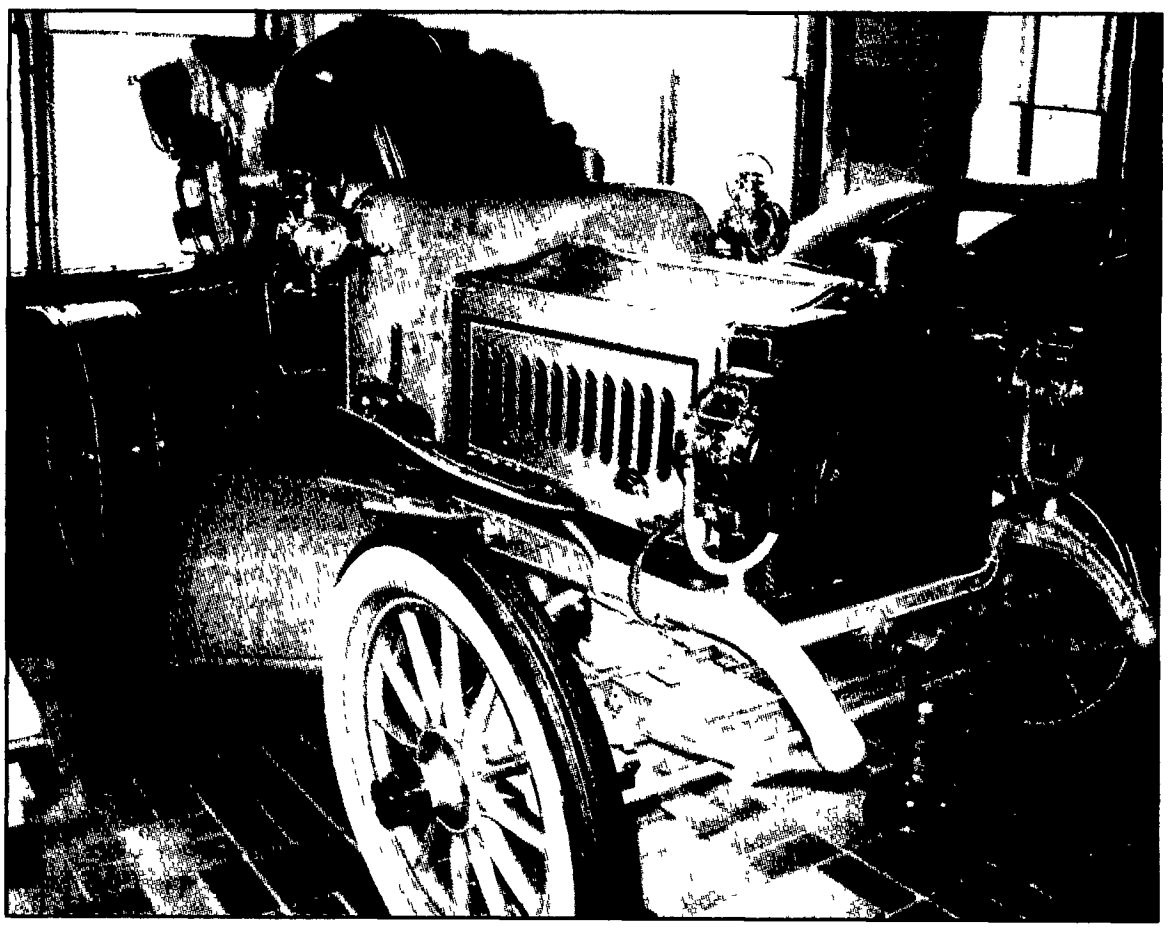
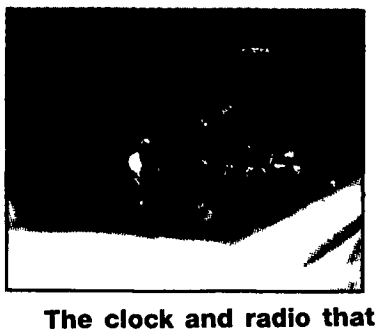
The 1933 Chevrolet Roadster features dual fog lights, dual horns, dual spotlights, dual sidemounts, a trunk for luggage, and a rumble seat that folds.



The 1906 green Mitchell Model is a C-4 Roadster made in Racine, Wi., is one of the cars donated to the museum.



The clock and radio that required a separate key to turn on still operates.

This Chicago motorcar is as stylish today as in 1895, but its worth has increased to $350,000, according to Bill Smith, executive director of AACA Museum.

AACA Museum Project Plans July 21 Expo

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — The Antique Automobile Club of America (AACA) Museum has purchased property to erect a museum to transport visitors back to the days of the horseless carriage and bring them step-by-step through the years, showing the technology and evolving mystique of the motorcar.

From wooden spokes to rumble seats, then to fins and muscle cars, this interactive journey promises to fascinate and educate visitors.

The track of land is along Route 39 near Hershey. To date, utilities, roads, and a storage building have been erected. But more than 5 million is needed to complete the project and more is needed to design, construct, and maintain the exhibits.

The AACA Museum Expo is one of the ways money is raised for the project.

The sixth annual AACA Museum Expo is planned for July 21 at the Palmyra Fire Company Grounds, E. Spruce and N. Grant St., Palmyra.

Gates open at 7 a.m. Show cars are welcomed at 8 a.m. Trophy presentation at 3 p.m. for seven different categories, starting at 1929 and earlier to the 1970s. In addition to the vehicle show, the day-long event includes a flea market, arts and crafts, car corral, tractor and farm machinery display, and a pedal car display.

Great Art Rescue: Program to Repatriate Nazi-Looted Art

BOB JACKMAN
Antiques Online

This July Fourth we reflect on American heroes and take special pride in those Americans who conducted the greatest art rescue in the history of civilization.

In recent years, numerous articles have focused on a handful of artworks that were not rescued and repatriated by Allied forces. The bigger story is that over five million art objects were recovered, researched, and returned to the country where they had been owned prior to World War II.

The Monuments, Fine Art, and Archives Service (MFA&A) unit of the U.S. Army rescued thousands of European masterpieces that comprised the core of the Western artistic tradition. Nazi forces eventually looted most museums and major collections from Paris to St Petersburg. Americans often recovered these works in large Nazi storage depots outside their rightful nation.

By 1951, most had been returned to their legitimate pre-Nazi era nations, institutions or private owners. Most Nazi-looted art that was never returned was stored in eastern Germany that was conquered by the Soviet Army.

Created in response to colossal art looting, the MFA&A program embodied a revolutionary concept of wartime responsibilities. Until the MFA&A program was instituted in 1943, the world had accepted the concept that to the victor belong the spoils. Conquering nations have historically looted the artistic wealth of defeated nations. Victorious troops have often left a scorched path of destruction.

The intent of the MFA&A was high-minded and ambitious. For the first time in history, a conquering army recognized a responsibility to preserve the art of the conquered nation and to return that art to previously looted

More than $3,000,000 in tax-deductible contributions has been contributed to the museum project within the last seven years. More than 56 automobiles have been donated. These include Tuckers, Cords, Packards, and Lincolns.

These will be displayed in the newly-constructed museum. Smith eagerly shows visitors the cars in storage and tells of the stories connected to the antique vehicles.

He points to a White 1935 sedan and said, "White did not make cars, but buses and trucks that year. But a lady doctor who had purchased a significant amount of stock in the company insisted they make her a sedan."

The French slope back of the car still has it's original windows. The steel doors are much stronger and sounder than contemporary cars.

Like many of the museum's possession, the one-of-a-kind vehicle was donated to AACA after the woman's death.

"Every car has a story," Smith said.

A 1933 Chevrolet Roadster in particular fascinates Smith. He said few canvas top cars have survived because often the canvas tops rotted and water seepage rotted out the floors of the car.

Although Chevrolets outsold Fords 100 to 1 during the early 1930s, few Chevrolets can be found. According to Smith, Chevrolets rarity is attributed to its wooden frame wrapped in medal. The cars were built to be more affordable, but were a cheaper product.

On the other hand, Henry Ford built a stronger car, but cut expenses with careful planning. The shipping crates in which the parts were shipped had carefully specified dimensions. This allowed the crates to be turned into charcoal briquettes that were packed in a pouch and sold with the car.

Until the new museum is constructed, the AACA Museum is located along Route 322 Hershey. For more information, call (800) 732-0999.

owners. The program attempted to reverse damage inflicted by Nazi plunders of neighboring nations and even on domestic German institutions and people. Nazi art looting was the most extensive in history, even dwarfing the Napoleonic plunder against which Nazis often railed. The MFA&A was assigned the most ambitious art rescue in the history of civilization, and it succeeded brilliantly.

Art Rescue by American Troops

Most Nazi art repositories were concealed, and defended, and some were booby-trapped. In The Faustian Bargain, historian Jonathan Petropoulos reported that Nazi leaders such as Martin Bormann had issued instructions to field personnel to destroy artworks and also the archives that identified the rightful owners of the works. Those commands triggered conflict within Nazi ranks and produced chaos in the field.

Thousands of masterpieces were stored in Alt Aussee salt mines, and German SS units had installed eight 500-kilogram aerial bombs to destroy the mines and artwork. That threatened the future livelihood of local families in the one-industry town. Pragmatic middle level German officials, perhaps anticipating the Nazi collapse and aware of Allied intentions to prosecute war criminals, channeled weapons to local forces who held off the SS forces, and prevented the detonation of the bombs. Time and again, American forces entered repositories facing similar situations. The initial recovery at each location imperiled men.

Sometimes members of the resistance provided the Allies with information about art stashes, and that information was forwarded to the MFA&A. A key art figure in the French resistance was Louvre curator Rose Valland. Craig Smyth recounted her contribution in his book Re patriation of Art from the Col lecting Point in Munich Afte World War II.

When Germans took control of the Louvre, Valland gave the appearance of assisting the Germans as she stayed on to provide the Nazis with information about the collection. However, she channeled information about Nazi operations to the resistance, and eventually that reached James Rorimer of MFA&A.

In April 1945, he was on the front and secured repositories identified by Valland as American forces advanced to those stashes. His quick action enabled him to secure the Neuschwanstein castle, "the most spectacular of all repositories." In addition to artwork, he captured a systematic catalog of the art, and two Nazi art experts. Those led to more discoveries.

At times the bartering of artworks became a precious card in the game of peace negotiations as Lynn Nicholas related in her book The Rape of Europa. By late 1942 it was clear to Hitler that his chief ally, Benito Mussolini of Italy was losing power, and his collapse would leave Nazi forces exposed on the southern front. Hitler dispatched General Wolff to Italy. When the Italian king removed Mussolini from power and arrested him, Wolff descended with German troops in an effort to hold Italy. During that holding operation, art looting commenced, particularly in Florence.

Great Art Rescue

Once artwork left Florence, Allied forces were not able to determine its location. Wolff's German Army was able to continue holding substantial Italian ground into the spring of 1945, but he recognized that his situations was increasing vulnerable as Hitler's health and military position declined. In February 1945 Wolff proposed an Italian peace meeting in a message to US diplomat Allen Dulles located in Switzerland, and they met March 8. By April negotiations were in gridlock because Hitler was demanding a fight to the end and the Russians wanted the Allies to insist upon an unconditional surrender that would enable them to split the spoils of war.

On April 20 negotiations broke off, and should have triggered the fight to the end. However before leaving the meeting, Wolff handed Dulles a handwritten note stating the location of looted Italian art treasures, and an inventory that included many works the Allies had not yet realized were looted. He suggested the US Army be dispatched to these locations. Army units secured the art treasures, and on the basis of good will established by Wolff's gesture, four days later the Italian peace accord was signed. The treaty was announced to the world eight days later on May 2, 1945. The German use of a goodwill card that played on the American desire to preserve the art history of the Western World ultimately saved lives on the Italian front.

Soon after the Nazi rise to power in 1933, American art scholars received information that the National Socialists were as much a cultural organization as a political organization. The top half dozen Nazi leaders shared an obsession for traditional German art and viciously attacked modernism as degenerate. Long before foreign hostilities erupted, Nazis used intimidation within Germany to extort traditional works and to suppress and destroy modern works. Interpreting the Nazi climate, some German art experts immigrated to America. Two of the most brilliant were Jakob Rosenberg and Seymour Slive who became art professors at Harvard University. They provided the scholarly community with addition insight into the Nazi art program.

Unlike art scholars, the wider American society was unaware of the Nazi interest in the arts. Scholars sent American publishers articles about Nazi attacks on modern art, but publishers declined to print the material because it was too controversial. Nazi supporters included major public figures such as pilot Charles Lindberg and artist Rockwell Kent, and publishers did not want to cross them. In The Rape of Europa Lynn Nicholas documented that NOMA director Alfred Barr wrote three articles in 1933 addressing the National Socialists attitude toward art, but major magazines declined to publish them because they were deemed too controversial. Only one article was published, and that was in an obscure magazine.

The MFA&A seed spouted in the brain of Professor George Stout, the shy director of Harvard's Straus Conservation Center with dual expertise in art and science. His seed was nurtured by a former Wall Street banker turned art professor Paul Sachs who enlisted support of other Harvard graduates such as John Walker, director of the National Gallery of Art, and President Franklin Roosevelt. After the plan received authorization, George Stout scooted along battlefronts of Western Europe implementing the program in the field.

Days after Pearl Harbor, George Stout proposed the formation of an America unit to rescue Nazi-looted art and return it to the rightful owners.

All works were researched. Some went directly back to their pre-war museum or owner, and all others went back to the nation from which they had been looted.

THE ANTIQUE DETECTIVE

Anne Gilbert

Late Victorian Era Focused On Surface Decoration

From pattern glass to painted china and every object used in daily life, the emphasis in American design from 1870 to 1900 was decorative surfaces. Artists and craftsmen treated surfaces of china, wood, and silver as if they were a canvas.

Among the many influences were the bright nature themes from Japan. Colorful motifs included sunflowers, vines, birds, and seashells. It was quite a transition from the heavy, dark interiors of the mid-19th century. Although it is known as the "aesthetic movement" many of the design elements spilled over into the later arts and crafts movement. It has all been put together in the recently opened exhibition, "On the Surface: Late 19th Century Decorative ARts" at Charlotte, N.C.'s Mint Museum of Art.

"The late Victorian style was not so much one of form, but rather of decoration, ornamentation, and embellishment," said Dr. Barbara Perry, Mint curator of decorative arts.

Among the many design influences of this eclectic period were Gothic, Greek Islamic, and Japanese. The latter being the most popular.

CLUES: Shapes became more angular, smoother, and less flamboyant. The once popular use of carvings and deep modeling was replaced with more linear and light decorations.

One of the most lasting and popular examples is American cut glass.

Interest began at the 1876 Centennial Exposition where several American glass companies showed their new design concepts. Along with their displays of clear and colored glass that was etched, cut engraved, molded, blown and pressed, was "rich-cut glass" known today as brilliant-cut glass. At the time it was introduced the pieces were mainly used for decorative purposes, not for daily use.

Hundreds of patterns were introduced from 1876 until it temporarily went out of fashion by the end of World War 1. In the late 1970s it was being eagerly sought and collected.

Today signed pieces by quality glassmakers in the most intricate patterns can sell for more than $3,000.

Because trademarks were often acid-etched into the glass they are hard to spot.

Over the years patterns and designs changed. Each of the designs had a name, not necessarily in keeping with the actual design. There are many books on cut-glass patterns showing patterns and names.

Furniture designed during this period often used marquetry. It was in a variety of materials from colored woods, ivory, mother-of-pearl, thin sheets of metal and other precious materials. Often elaborate marquetry motifs included floral and nature subjects.

Ebonized wood, (wood that has been blackened) usually of cherry , showed off the marquetry designs. Gilding was also popular.

If you come across a chair with visible tack heads, they were often part of Modern Gothic design pieces. Other metal decorations used bronze, silver and nickel treated to look like brass and cut into various shapes and motifs, applied to the surface with brads or tacks.

If an object at first glance appears to be Japanese, a closer look may prove it to be late Victorian with Japanese influence. Known as "Japonism", furniture, silver, and painted china adapted Japanese motifs. A good example are the dragons used frequently by Rookwood pottery painters.

To learn more, send for the well-illustrated catalog, "On The Surface: Late Nineteenth Century Decorative Arts." The cost is $25 plus shipping charges. Mail your order to Gift Shop, Mint Museuam 2730 Randolph Road, Charlotte, NC 28207. Or E-mail SFisher(@Mint Museum.Org.

The exhibition runs from now through August 12th.

New Idea Expands Hay Rake Line

ATLANTA, Ga. — With more than 70 years of experience building and marketing hay rakes, New Idea® recently announced the release of eight new rake models that not only broaden the line, but also represent new entries in the lineup.

Among the new offerings are five new wheel rakes in three different size classes, and three new V-rakes in three different sizes. The choices start with the Model 4317, which is an eight-wheel, mechanical-fold model that has the capacity to rake in up to 17.2 feet of crop width into windrows that are adjustable from 40 to 68 inches in width. For a little more convenience, customers can step up to the Model 4318, which offers the same capacity from hydraulic-folding wings.

Customers looking for a 12-wheel New Idea wheel rake, however, have three choices. For those willing to trade a little labor for economy, New Idea offers the Model 4321, which can pull in up to 24 feet of crop width. And for hydraulic-fold convenience, there's the Model 4322.

For heavy crops and maximum capacity, New Idea also offers the Model 4324. This 12-wheel model features inboard rake wheels on forward-folding wings and 46 inches of clearance under the rear beam for the unobstructed flow of high-volume hay. Raking width is infinitely variable from 0 to 24 feet, with windrow width adjustable from 38 to 58 inches.

Meanwhile, for those whose needs lean toward that of a V-rake, New Idea offers three sizes. Available in 8-, 10, and 12-wheel models, the new entries will be marketed as the 4308, 4310 and 4312, respectively. Regardless of which model or configuration best fits their operation, however, customers will find a myriad of performance features throughout the 4300 Series lineup.

Shared features include strong rake teeth that measure seven millimeters in diameter for maximum resistance to breakage and wear; rake wheels that lift in unison, and an adjustable drawbar clevis that lets the operator level the rake wheel beams, regardless of the tractor drawbar height.

A new 4240 rotary rake is built on a heavy-duty frame, offers an adjustable windrow width up to 14.75 feet, and has a gentle raking action that is especially effective at preventing leaf loss in alfalfa.

"Realizing that hay producers throughout North America have different programs and different needs, we're pleased to have so many choices to offer New Idea customers," says Tony Solon, General Marketing Manager for New Idea products. "In addition to the new 4300 Series wheel rakes, New Idea continues to offer a wide selection of parallel bar rakes and tedders, as well as the Model 4264 tedder rake and the Model 4111 dual rake hitch. As a result, we truly do have a hay management tool for every need."

The New Idea 4240 Rotary Rake is one of eight new hay rakes in multiple sizes from New Idea.

Empire Livestock To Manage Lewis County, N.Y. Market

LOWVILLE, N.Y. — Empire Livestock Marketing, L.L.C., which has successfully operated facilities in nine locations throughout New York state, will soon be expanding their services into Lowville, N.Y. and surrounding communities.

Effective Monday, July 9, the existing Lewis County Livestock Market on Route 12 in Lowville, will be operated by Empire Livestock Marketing. Empire Livestock, a subsidiary of Dairylea Cooperative Inc., is the largest full-service marketer of livestock in the northeast.

According to Dale Chambers, vice president of Empire Livestock and co-manager of the Lewis County facility, the first of many changes customers will see at the market will begin with the new name, Lewis County Burton's.

"Customers of the market will benefit from our years of experience and will be pleased to know that Empire Livestock/Burtons carries an impeccable reputation, and is known for dealing with farmers in a fair and respectable way."

Chamber's co-manager Jack Bero of Empire's Governeur Markets notes that a broader spectrum of services will be offered. "In addition to the sale of livestock, services will expand to include the sale of small animals and farm machinery auctions," said Bero.

"Lewis County is one of the best dairy segments in New York State," said Bero. "We are sure this will contribute to the market's success as farmers will look to us to buy their replacements and sell as well."

Hours of operation at Lewis County Burton's will change from Mondays and Thursdays to Mondays and Wednesdays. The new sale schedule will be: Monday: 2:30 p.m. — calves, followed by beef. Wednesday: 11 a.m. — small animals (goats, sheep, pigs, chickens, rabbits, etc.); also, farm related produce — hay, straw, eggs, tools, etc. 1 p.m. — dairy cattle (A special monthly dairy sale will be held every second Wednesday. The first special dairy sale will be held on Wednesday, July 11.) Following dairy will be the sale of feeders, calves, and beef. There will not be a Thursday sale.

GRAND ISLAND, Neb. — Global Industries, Inc. of Grand Island, Neb., has strengthened its position in the grain storage and handling industry with the recent acquisition of Nebraska Engineering Company (NECO) of Omaha, Neb., and Hutchinson/Mayrath, Inc. of Clay Center, Kan. The two companies were purchased from TIC United Corp. of Dallas, Tex., effective May 31.

Each company will continue to operate independently as separate divisions of Global Industries. Doug Scheible, former vice president of finance at Hutchinson/Mayrath, has been appointed general manager. Bill Hiltgen, current president of NECO, will continue as president under the new ownership.

"Our focus is on growth and innovation," said Anderson. "We have a strong vision for the future, and it comes with the financial resources and experience necessary to lead in domestic and international markets. Our goal for NECO and Hutchinson/Mayrath is to help them accelerate their growth and prosper, which has been their tradition." Hutchinson/Mayrath is a leading manufacturer of portable grain augers and grain handling equipment for loading and unloading grain bins. The company will continue to operate out of Clay Center, Kan., and will continue to market its products through its existing distributor base.

Originally founded in 1960 as Nebraska Engineering Company, NECO will continue its operations in Omaha, Neb., and will market its grain handling, drying and conditioning products through existing channels.

Stallman: Global Trade Vital, But Smaller Agreements Filling Gaps

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — While urging the World Trade Organization to tackle numerous, stifling barriers to global agricultural trade, the American Farm Bureau Federation will continue to encourage the U.S. government to aggressively pursue bilateral, regional, and multilateral trade agreements to secure markets for U.S. agricultural exports.

Addressing attendees at the World Agricultural Forum recently, AFBF President Bob Stallman said the WTO must "move and move now" to address the use of tariffs and non-tariff trade barriers, such as the imposition and maintenance of "non-science-based sanitary and phytosanitary" measures to block trade.

"In the meantime, we support and encourage our government to work with like-minded countries and pursue other trade-enhancing measures, be they bilateral, regional, or multilateral," Stallman said. "And we certainly want to see (the United States end) all unilateral sanctions and food embargoes, which penalize only the domestic producer."

Stallman said the multilateral work conducted under the Asia Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC) Food System initiative sets a good example for what U.S. farmers believe should result from a "fruitful WTO round."

"The resultant infrastructure of the (APEC) plan will permit participating nations to hit the ground running and take fuller advantage of the new trading system than those nations who are not prepared," he said. "The fundamental reforms we seek will build the foundation the APEC system anticipates and rests upon."

Global progress, however, also is essential. Stallman said there has been some "movement in the WTO agricultural negotiations that are now under way. Progress in these talks has been impressive as negotiators pursue their charge, even though a trade round was not launched as planned in Seattle in 1999."

Stallman said WTO member countries have established deadlines for the coming year that, when achieved, "will put agriculture in a good negotiating position once a round is successfully launched." Farm Bureau supports the commencement of WTO talks this November in Qatar.

Leading up to those talks, Stallman said Farm Bureau is paying "continuous attention to details and is closely monitoring the ongoing trade discussions as we look ahead to new opportunities.

"From the results of past rounds, it is clear to U.S. farmers that this round must include all sectors as a comprehensive, single undertaking (that does not exclude agriculture)," he said.

"Trading agricultural favors for other sectors' benefits will no longer be acceptable domestically."

Stallman said a major goal of American farmers during WTO talks, as well as farmers in many other nations, is "the elimination of export subsidies now and tariff barriers eventually, within a specified deadline, recognizing and addressing the impact on import sensitive products."

He also said U.S. farmers will push for implementation of health and food safety standards that are based on science as is already required by provisions of the Uruguay Round Sanitary and Phytosanitary Measures Agreement.

"This concern does not deal with changing, but rather following the rules that have been agreed to," he said. "Products enhanced through biotechnology need to be judged on their merits, not on political science."

He said the WTO dispute settlement process also must be streamlined so that its rulings "pave the way to promote, rather than restrict trade.

"This is crucial because the credibility of the WTO depends in part on dispute settlement rulings that steer the direction of global trade," Stallman said.

Overall, Farm Bureau supports WTO progress along the lines of the goals stated in the long-range plan for the multilateral APEC initiative.

"An open food system will enable participating countries and companies to build and grow, once the new trading regime takes hold," Stallman said.

"U.S. farmers want fairer and freer trade because we see profit opportunity certainly. But there is far more trade moves more than products. Trade moves ideas and ideals. It promotes social as well as material gain. We need to maintain an atmosphere that encourages openness to innovation, promotes enterprise, and rewards those who participate within the rules."

Stallman said that a tide of public sentiment for more open trading rules "will benefit producers and consumers, while building a more peaceful world." U.S. farmers, he said, are eager "to share in this progress as we seek our own prosperity while promoting improved standards of living globally."

IPC: Consumer Confidence In Global Food Supply A Must

WASHINGTON, D.C. — With public attention around the world focused on outbreaks of hoof and mouth disease, regulation of biotechnology and mad cow disease, international trade officials must take steps to build confidence in the global food system if they want to maintain an open, global trading system.

Negotiators planning to launch a global round of trade reform talks this fall in Qatar must realize that a lack of consumer confidence in the global food system jeopardizes free trade.

Achieving consumer confidence therefore is not just a luxury — it is a necessity in today's global trade environment. This is the main message from the International Policy Council on Agriculture, Food and Trade (IPC) in its latest position paper, Achieving Public Confidence in the Global Food System. The paper makes recommendations for the WTO talks aimed at bolstering consumer confidence in the global food system.

"In recent years, the public has exercised an increasing influence on international trade," said IPC Chairman Robert L. Thompson. "And as our food system becomes more global, consumer interests are more often spilling over into the trade arena. Maintaining public confidence in the global food system without jeopardizing the benefits that can be derived from a more liberal trading system is a critical issue." The IPC is an independent, international group of agricultural leaders and experts promoting an efficient and open global food and agricultural system.

The most basic consumer interests relating to food are its safety, price and availability. The IPC believes that satisfying these needs is the fundamental role of public policy. Domestic and international regulations that are science-based, transparent and predictable are the best ways to address consumer expectations about food safety.

Governments must ensure that industry claims are not false or misleading to consumers. With their basic needs met, the personal preferences of consumers in such areas as production methods can and should be met by the market.

Policies implemented in response to consumer expectations should distort international trade as little as possible, the IPC paper said. This is because an open trading system addresses the most important consumer concern of all — an adequate supply of affordable food.

Trade plays a crucial role in generating economic growth, which provides consumers around the world with access to affordable food supplies. Moreover, a global food system based on open trade and guaranteed access to food supplies allows countries to survive domestic production shortfalls and other food crises, without expending precious resources in support of unsustainable production.

The key recommendations of the IPC paper were:

- Consumers' needs for food security, product safety and product integrity must be accommodated. These needs should not be suppressed or ignored, even if they are not based on solid evidence.
- Given the crucial role trade plays in generating economic growth and in providing consumers with access to affordable food supplies around the world, specific consumer expectations should be accommodated in ways that do not distort trade, or which distort trade as little as possible.
- When consumer concerns can only be met with trade measures, the measures should be proportional to the objective pursued and restrict trade as little as possible.
- Measures should be taken strictly within existing trade rules — any unilateral or discriminatory action should be ruled out.
- Measures should neither be arbitrary nor used as a pretext for protectionism.
- Consumers must have adequate information to make informed choices. Mandatory labeling is called for when consumer health and safety are at issue. Voluntary labeling is preferred for products that cater to consumer demands for particular methods of production.
- Governments must ensure that the information provided to consumers is truthful, accurate, verifiable and not misleading in any way.
- Consumer expectations should be considered on their own merits and not be confounded with producer concerns, or society's concerns about globalization.
- Precaution is warranted when dealing with food safety, human health and safety, and with the protection of flora and fauna. Such precaution should be included within the limits set by the SPS Agreement.
- There is no satisfactory alternative to scientific evidence as a basis to address consumer concerns about the global food system.

Co-op's New Molt-Inducing Feed Aids Poultry Industry

RICHMOND, Va. — Southern States Cooperative's poultry-producing patrons are in prime position to have store markets for their eggs and broilers. That's because the co-op, under the auspices of CRF, has been at the forefront of animal welfare research for years, accurately anticipating market demands for a better-treated bird.

"McDonald's has recently gotten a lot of press for its stance on the conditions under which its McNuggets or Egg McMuffins were raised," says Dr. Lance Minear, manager of poultry research services. "While we can't ensure birds are given the mandated 72 square inches of personal space, the co-op can provide molting-season feeds that don't starve the birds, as required by the giants of the food-service industry."

Minear adds that the formula, dubbed "low ME" for low metabolizable energy, is easier for producers to manage and lowers overall feed costs. It may even slow the shedding of Salmonella Enteritidis, dovetailing with Southern States' research in lowering risk of farm-gate-to-dinner-plate food contamination.

Rather than put layers through a fortnight-long hard molt by starving the birds, Minear and his team developed a "loned" oat that provides a high-fiber, low-energy diet. The birds molted and, likewise, began production in the same environment right on schedule.

He had similar success during the soft-molt phase, which is typically produced by greatly restricting the birds' diet. And, because producers didn't bear the tedious task of weighing and measuring portions, they saved time and money. Moreover, mortality rates were 75 percent less than the losses expected from both molts.

NOW IS THE TIME...
TO SERVICE YOUR PLANTER!

As the 2001 corn and bean planting season comes to a close, we encourage you to reflect momentarily on your spring planting experience. Does anything come to mind that may require attention before next planting season? Now is the time to deal with any potential problems or worn items before placing your planter in storage.

Contact the planter shop at Binkley & Hurst today to schedule your

UPTIME PLANTER SERVICE!

Mr Planter Owner

Thank you for taking a minute to consider our services

Binkley & Hurst Bros Inc is offering a preseason inspection and evaluation of your planter for the purpose of identifying worn, broken, or malfunctioning parts Many times, seemingly insignificant wear will affect the accuracy of your planter more than you realize If nothing else, it may be time to have your finger pickup meters checked on our test stand Also, new innovations, attachments and options are constantly being introduced which may be of interest to you for installation on your planter

Binkley & Hurst parts and service personnel are specifically trained and informed planter specialists, ready to examine your planter with you! If you determine that the planting proficiency of your planter could be improved with our service, we would be happy to provide that service for you, and a technician would return at a later date to assist you in doing the work. We encourage you to be part of the actual servicing so that any pointers or insight, which the technician may have for you with regard to planter operation, could be conveyed at that time.

If you set up an appointment for a planter evaluation, you will be charged a flat fee

At time of inspection we will recommend to you any item needing attention, also at that time we will remove your seed meters to take in for testing if you so desire.

If you have any questions, please contact the planter service department at 717-626-4705 or 800-414-4705.

Thank you.

Case IH Magnums from Hoober...

The Most Dependable Tractors on the Market

"We started with Hoober around 1990, and our first piece of equipment was a Case-IH 7120 Magnum. We have over 5,000 hours on it now, and we have had no major problems at all. It has been a good piece of machinery for us - they are very dependable tractors. Hoober's service and parts support has been really good too, they are there when you need them."

What makes the TORO TWISTER So Special?

Special Active In-Frame Suspension

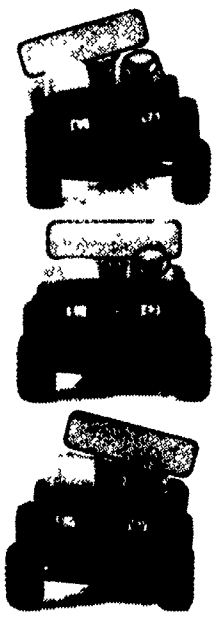
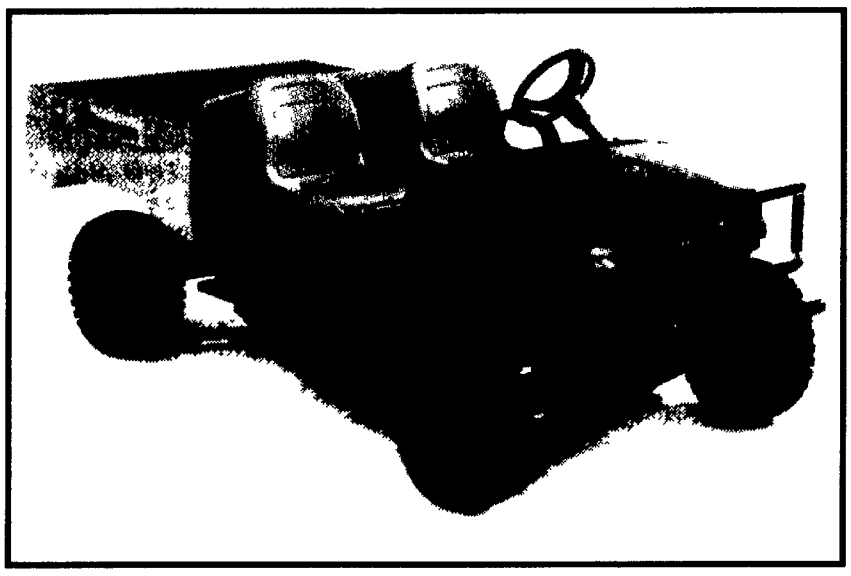
The Twister has a unique Active In-Frame Suspension that greatly improves traction and gives you a smooth ride, even over rough terrain.

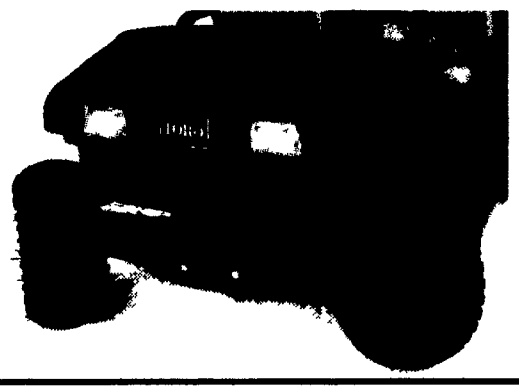
The Twister suspension provides better traction and a superior ride compared to the rigid-frame competition. Unlike a rigid-frame vehicle, the Torsional Pivot Joint (1) connects the front frame to the rear frame (2). It creates a flexible frame that keeps all four wheels in contact with the ground as it travels over rough terrain (3). This flexibility also gives the front cab a smoother ride.





A new all-purpose vehicle... with a twist

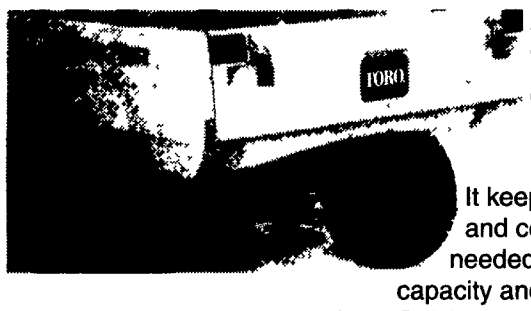
Special Tight Turning Radius



When you get into a narrow spot, a tight turning radius makes all the difference.

The Twister's 70 degree Sector and Pinion steering provides a very tight 9 foot turning radius, the best in its category.

Special Durable 14.75 cu. ft. Cargo Bed



A tough, durable double-walled polyethylene cargo bed that's built to last.

It keeps its shape and stays dent and corrosion resistant, with no liner needed. A hefty 1000 lbs. Cargo bed capacity and a total load capacity of 1400 lbs. make Twister tops in its class. Quick release latches and a balanced load box design make dumping a breeze. Optional electric lift is available.

Special Projects and Jobs are easier with over 20 options available for you

Electric Bed Lift - makes it easier to dump heavy loads

Electric Wench and Brush Guard Bumper

Stake Sides - to haul bigger loads and volume capacities

Operator Shield - to protect the riders from loads

Hitch Kit -for towing your boat or whatever you haul along.

And NOW, for a limited time, only on the Toro Twister...

OSU Researcher Giving Turkeys A Stronger Leg To Stand On

COLUMBUS, Ohio - A model developed to measure bone strength in poultry may help farmers choose breeds that meet market demand for meaty birds while eradicating bone deformities associated with rapid weight gain.

Alfred Soboyejo, an Ohio State University agricultural engineering researcher, studied physical and biochemical factors associated with poultry breeding to determine what combinations increase tibia and femur bone strength in turkeys and broiler chickens.

Genetic selection of poultry breeds to improve body weight increases weight gain without compensating for increased bone strength to support that weight. The result is leg bone deformities, such as "bowing" and "buckling" that cause lameness, broken bones and inflammations, and cost the poultry industry $32 million a year in production losses.

Karl Nestor, an animal science researcher from Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center in Wooster, Ohio, collaborated with Soboyejo on the project. Soboyejo found that specific poultry breeds play a role in increasing bone strength and believes that bone deformities could eventually be eliminated through genetic selection in much the same manner it has paved the way for bigger birds with good meat.

"Species are very important. We can't select birds on body weight alone. We have to find ways to increase the body weight and breast muscle with correspondingly higher bone strength in the legs to promote good health of the bird," said Soboyejo. "By identifying poultry breeds that exhibit the best bone strength, we can then recommend to farmers which birds are best for the market."

The project is the first of its kind to combine the principles of biomechanics and probabilistic structural mechanics with biology to identify and control physical and biochemical parameters as they relate to bone structure. Soboyejo, looking for a quantitative tool useful to farmers, developed new models for the quantification of bone strength and body weight gains in turkeys and broiler chickens, as they relate to physical and biochemical parameters. Some of these parameters of bones include elasticity of the cellular structural material of the bone, density and collagen content.

Soboyejo found that certain chemical factors, such as collagen content of bone and the presence of pryridinoline and deoxypridinoline, also enhance overall bone strength. Collagen, a protein that largely makes up the organic layer of bone, combines with calcium salt crystals that form a cellular bone material with high mechanical properties of tensile and compressive strengths. Pyridinoline and deoxypridinoline are crosslinks of bone collagen used as markers to test bone diseases because they are released into the blood during bone degradation. Soboyejo suggested that a change in diet or addition of vitamins to a diet might enhance the effects of those chemical indicators to improve bone strength.

Soboyejo believes that such indicators used to measure bone strength in poultry can also have practical applications in other scientific fields such as veterinary medicine and orthopedic medicine. "People suffering from osteoporosis, for example, could benefit from this type of work, because the factors that contribute to bone strength can be clearly identified and controlled," he said.

EVERLAST II EVERLAST II EVERLAST II

Metal Roofs Aren't Created Equal

EVERLAST II IS BETTER:
- it is galvanized heavier, like old times.
- it is heat formed, less paint cracks.
- is cut while hot, prevents early edge rust.
- won't scratch as easy, paint is harder.
- won't bend or buckle as easy, stronger design.
- laps are tighter, and virtually invisible.
- nail/screws seal better, ribs fit tighter to head.
- zinc phosphate, not chromate under paint.
- still priced about the same or less.

EVERLAST II
is excellent for for houses and barns.
DOUBLE DIPPED GALVANIZED is proven best for animals.
STANDING SEAM
is ideal for houses.

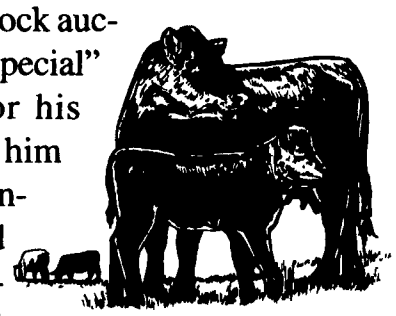
BEEF TIPS

How Simmental bulls, cows, calves, heifers and show steers are sold (Part 4)

1. Sales are held regularly in Pennsylvania and Maryland. Call for a FREE list of all sales and all breeders in your area.

2. Sometimes Simmental stock is offered at the grade or commercial livestock auctions. Ask your livestock auctioneer if he will host a "special" Simmental offering for his regular customers. Tell him you want to add Simmental genetics to your herd and you want to see Simmental breeding stock.



Tell him to be sure to advertise the "Special Simmental Offering" so that you don't miss it. Ask him to check the Association Directory for local breeders who can supply the offering.

3. Ask local breeders to send you a list (with asking price) of their present Simmental offering. You can get their phone numbers by requesting a state directory at the numbers listed below.
